FALL OF THE GREEK MINISTRY

A Grave Crisis at Athens.

THE END OF THE WAR IN SIGHT.

Greece will Withdraw Troops from Crete and Appeal to Powers.

LONDON, April 28.—Everything points to the conclusion of the war by the intervention of the Powers.

Reports of the fall of the Greek Ministry are confirmed. It is probable that a coalition cabinet will be formed.

The situation at Athens is very grave as a result of the rapid development of the revolutionary feeling. This condition of things appears to have resulted largely from the cessation of hostilities in Epirus.

The correspondent of the Times at Athens says that the popular ferment has been partly allayed by the dismissal of Prince Constantine's staff, though the most extreme portion of the press still demands the recall of the Crown Prince and Prince Nicholas.

Continuing the despatch says: "Indeed it looks probable that to-morrow will see the end of the whole business. There is reason to believe that the Government is contemplating the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Crete and an appeal to the powers to settle the trouble. This change upon the part of the Government is due to Edhem Pasha having intimated his intention of marching upon Athens."

DEBATE ON THE TARIFF.

Nicholas Flood Davin and J. Ross Robertson to the Front.

Liberal-Conservatives True to Their Principles.

OTTAWA, April 28.—Controller Patter son resumed the debate on the tariff bill yesterday afternoon. He claimed that it was only incidentally protective. He spoke for about an hour, and was followed by Nicholas Flood Davin with a lively address, in the course of which an interesting incident occurred. Mr. Davin said that he had heard the Government had received a despatch from one of the secretaries of state saying that Her Majesty's Government was pleased with the expression of loyalty, but that the preference involving the treaty could not be sanctioned. He asked Hon. Mr. Davies, who was leading the House pro tem, whether or not the report was true. Davies said: "I don't see why I should answer such a question as that. The hon. gentleman seems to know everything." "This," said Mr. Davin, "is the manner of the Government. They make no answer to questions like this, which we have a right to ask and the public ought to have answered. Mr. Davin described the Governments, attitude as highly theatrical. The Finance Minister was performing the tariff skirt dance. The Ministry was described as "an organized peridy" and the measure before the House as meeting Johnson's phrase, "a conglomerate mass of heterogeneous matter."

J. Ross Robinson, Independent, of Toronto, said that on the tariff issue he was a follower of Sir Charles Tupper. The Government had certainly stolen the other party's clothes; but he proposed to follow the old Leader, clothes, or no clothes. Mr. Laurier had, he said, attacked the policy of protection in the only way it could be successfully attacked by a long and protracted siege. Direct assault would be vain. Mr. Laurier's only chance was by disguise movement and strategy. Already the enemy were within the breastwork and there was danger of them taking their citadel. The debate was adjourned.

The Opposition Members and Senators held their second caucus of the session yesterday. Some discussions took place on the tariff and the opinion was unanimously and emphatically expressed that the Liberal-Conservatives would resist any departure from the policy of protection by the general or special tariff.

It is not yet decided whether an amendment will be proposed to the tariff resolution before the House.

PRINCE OF WALES COLLEGE.

SIR,—I see that the shining light of the Summerside Journal, Barney O'Regan, has made my last letter the subject of one of his periodical effusions. Had I known it was to be consigned to the clutches of one whose "beauty of diction and elegance of expression" was so distinguished that he occasionally gives vent to it after the style of a spring poet (that is, of course, when he has not some unfortunate to criticize), I would have hesitated before writing it. He describes the breast of the learned disciple of George Eliot as expanding almost to bursting. He no doubt was thinking of the self-satisfaction which he enjoys when reading his own effusions in print. Perhaps he may see fit to arise as the wished-for "modern Byron in the cause of Greece." He wishes to impress upon the public the fact that a great proportion of the students only spend a five months' course in P. W. C. I wish to say that there is no five months' course. All students must take the full ten months' course, so the facetious "Barney" is entirely at sea in this statement. Then he devotes a few lines to some imbecile remarks about what he designates "the habits of the students."

Further on he supposes that I will "sorely lament the fact of some, whom he mentions, not being graduates of P. W. C. Well, perhaps so, but certainly many of the leading men of Summerside have testified to their good opinion of the College by sending their sons there for a course.

In regard to the deficiency of the graduates in English,—what is the use of sending them to the common schools if they do not become well acquainted with their grammar before they leave there to enter P. W. C.?

In "Barney's" letter, the saying, "Advice is cheap," is brought to one's mind by the amount of it which he so gratuitously extends.

And as for Summerside being only a village, I think it must be a slip of his pen (or his mind), for surely a mere village could not contain such a noted literary light as Barney O'Regan. It would have to be enlarged to give scope to his learned criticisms. And no doubt he will endeavor to completely squelch this feeble attempt with his ready wit (?).

ANOTHER SUGGESTION.

SIR,—According to a London despatch of yesterday, copied into this morning's Guardian, it is believed that England has purchased Delagoa Bay from Portugal and will fortify Inyack Island, as a source of great strength and advantage in the event of war with the Transvaal. Since England has done so many things along that line lately, would it not be prudent for Scotland and Ireland to unite and purchase the Sandwich Islands, and thereby add a little strength to their crumbling fortunes.
