Preparations Finalized For 4-H Exchange Visit

The 2nd Interprovincial 4-H Exchange for Canada's 4-H club members will be conducted July 14 to 27. Termed by 4-H officials as one of the most significant projects ever attempted by the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs, the exchange will see a total of 90 4-H members take two-week educational tours in provinces other than their own. The program was initiated last year as a Golden Anniversary Year function and met with such enthusiastic approval that it has been adopted as an annual national 4-H Club activity.

Provincial delegations will leave by air from each province after departure ceremonies on July 13. The Royal Bank of Canada, a long-term council member, is again absorbing the costs of travel for the delegates, as well as assuming the role of host at the farewell functions.

On arrival at pre-arranged destination points, the travelling 4-H members will be guests of the host province. In the provinces the visiting delegates will be spread in host families. These families, in turn, will show their guests points of interest and provide them with opportunities to observe local 4-H activities and agricultural practices.

OFFICIALS OPTIMISTIC

Delegates will return home July 27. Provincial activities in the two-week period of the exchange will emphasize the farm-to-farm visit aspect of the exchange program. Education through travel and exchange of ideas, is the prime motive behind the program. Club members participating in the exchange have been selected through careful screening of individual leadership abilities and records of 4-H achievment.

4-H officials are optimistic that the 1964 exchange will be even more successful than last year's program.

The representatives of the other nine provinces scheduled to visit P.E.I. are as follows:

Lionel Hinch, Saskatchewan. Host family, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thompson, Kensington RR 5.

Leslie Cochran, British Columbia. Host family, Mr. and Mrs. Verner Coles, North Milton.

evidence to show how this will be done.

Earlier, Mr. Hellyer said the government intends to create a single, streamlined defence force for Canada.

He said in the Commons that a single force is the best answer by far and that he is sure history would prove this.

There would still be squadrons of ships and planes and battalions of men but they would operate as a single force, not three.

Douglas Harkness, former Conservative defence minister, said he favors integration of admin istrative and service branches but opposes integration of land, sea and air fighting units.

"It would be impractical to roll up the fighting units into one shapeless mass," he said.

DEBATE RESUMES

They spoke in the resumed debate on the government's bill creating a single chief of defence staff in place of three service chiefs.

Mr. Harkness maintained Mr. Hellyer has failed to provide any evidence that the change won't result in more confusion than exists now.

Mr. Hellyer denied Mr. Harkness' contention that at least four, five chains of command would crop up.

He said there will be one organization for the whole defence force instead of three.

"We have a compass, we know where we're going and we'll keep a sharp lookout for rocks and shoals," Mr. Hellyer said.

WOULD BREAK MORALE

Mr. Harkness said Mr. Hellyer has so far followed a course designed to break down military morale.

The defence department was plunged in uncertainty about what form integration would take. Mr. Hellyer himself didn't seem to know. Many highly qualified officers were leaving the services.

Mr. Hellyer said, generally speaking, morale in the armed forces is extremely high, particularly among units in the field. He had just visited most units overseas and their morale was excellent. There was no apprehension by the men about their future.

Naturally, during a reorganization, there was some uncertainty about new jobs and who would fill them.

The new system could be out into effect in a few weeks after Parliament passed the bill. There would be no loss in the fighting effectiveness of the services during the changeover.

The trend in military establishments throughout the world was unmistakably and inevitably integration.

The government had a responsibility — and opportunity —to go ahead with integration of the forces.

Bridge Paving Scheduled Immediately

Paving of a 400-yard strip of the Hillsboro Bridge highway is expected to begin immediately, highways department officials said yesterday.

The section had been torn up and dynamite used under the surface to blow out soft fill that had moved under the roadway, causing the pavement to heave.

Highways officials said they are satisfied that loose fill has been blown out and more settling will not take place.

One official said foggy weather could delay the paving as the department feels it would be dangerous to use slow- moving, heavy machinery when visibility is poor for traffic.

RCAF's Central Band To Head Orange Parade

Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master Arthur MacMicken last night announced the Royal Canadian Airforce Central Command band from Ottawa will head the annual Orange Day Parade and celebrations in Charlottetown on July 11.

This is the first time since 1925 that the Orangemen have staged their parade in Charlottetown and a larger than usual turnout is anticipated. The reason for holding the parade on the 11th is due to the traditional day for the celebration falling this year on Sunday.

The parade will form up on Rochford Square at 2 p.m. and shortly after will move off along Kent Street east to Weymouth, north to Fitzroy and out to the coliseum at the Exhibition Grounds.

The program lineup will take care of both the young and old and will include sports, singing, dancing and a band concert. A group of noted singers will also participate in the celebrations.

Guest speaker will be the Most Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of British America, Carl W. Smith of Kitchener, Ont. Addresses will also be heard from other distinguished members of the Orange Order.

In stating that the famous band will be in attendance Mr. MacMicken said that it was through the efforts of the central committee the services of the band were obtained.

AGED CONSIDERED

To enable aged and disabled members to attend the celebrations and participate in the parade, Mr. MacMicken announced that a number of the automobile dealers of Charlottetown and Parkdale are making cars available to the organization.

Mr. MacMicken has also extended an invitation to all visitors to the Island who are lodge members in the other Canadian provinces or the U.S. to hall, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Jack Annear and family prior to their leaving the district, to take up residence in Montague.

An address read by Mrs. Cecil Hicken accompanied the presentation of a gift from their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Chessel Annear, who are leaving on an extended trip to Western Canada, were also remembered at this time with a gift from the Womens Institute.

The evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by Joe Kearney and Gerard Murphy. Refreshments were served.

Fog Delays Pierre Berton

People crowding into the lobby of Confederation Centre Theatre last night to see the premiere of Pierre Berton's "Adventures in the Great Northwest" were unavoidably disappointed.

Mr. Berton was held up on the trip to the Island and could not get to Charlottetown in time for the performance. The flight on which Mr. Berton was a passenger yesterday was grounded in Saint John because of fog. Subsequent efforts to reach Charlottetown in time for the show met with little success.
