NAVY TRIES NEW RUM, COST SHOWS INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — Tippling note from the public accounts: The navy spent $127,679 for rum in the 1961-62 fiscal year compared with $118,170 in the previous year.

The navy also changed its brand of rum, switching its total purchase to Lamb's Rum Company Limited, Montreal, from Captain Morgan Rum Distillers Limited, Lasalle, Que.

Such a switch is not made or 20 minutes and then return frivolously.

A five-man testing panel in the defence department's chemicals inspection branch puts rum samples submitted by distillers through rigorous organoleptic (taste and odor) tests.

The tasting board used to be all-civilian when the tests were begun in 1959. But the navy insisted on representation, which it now has.

The tasting process is strictly a dry run, though. The taster may only roll the rum around on his tongue and then spit it out, sipping water and nibbling on soda biscuits between his exertions. And the tasting bee lasts only a couple of days because the navy buys its rum in bulk once a year.

There are no full-time tasters. Volunteers taste and sniff the bouquet for only 15 to their regular work.

Que. Biologist Sees Threat From Minnows

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Gustave Prevost is a 54-year-old biologist who doesn't fish himself, but who has been trying to help Quebec's 40,000 anglers for years by campaigning against the use of minnows as live bait.

The minnow is a carrier and spawner of parasites that kill game fish. Minnows have been known to wipe out game fish in entire waterway systems. They get into "clean" lakes many ways, but mostly through fishermen using them as bait.

A couple of live minnows escaping into a lake from a fisherman's bait pail is all that's needed to start the process of mass infestation, says Dr. Prevost.

An authority on fish preservation and lake rehabilitation, he joined the Quebec water purification board last year as chairman, after 30 years of field work as a government biologist dealing with the minnow problem.

LONG EXPERIENCE

Dr. Prevost was director of the Quebec biological board for many years, and formerly director of biology for the University of Montreal.

Although no longer directly concerned with the problem, he says he has retained the interest "of an ordinary citizen" in the minnow menace and plans to continue his campaign "to educate fishermen about this real threat."

He campaigns for a "sanitary cordon" of native water systems that are already affected, encircling minnow-infested waters to limit the damage and restrict movement of disease carriers.

"Are the inhabitants of a town beset by an epidemic allowed to roam abroad and spread their germs? Of course not," he says. "The healthy are protected by restricting the freedom of the sick."

In lakes around Montreal minnows have so many parasites they cannot be given as fish food to muskies the government raises at laboratories in suburban Lachine. They would kill the muskies.

Dr. Prevost has seen Quebec impose a ban on sale of minnows without a special permit, but he wants a total ban with no strings attached — a ban such as those imposed in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

His worst fears are for virgin waters such as Assinica Lake in northern Quebec, accessible only by air. Of 21 prize trout in a recent provincial fishing contest 14 came from Assinica, one weighing more than 10 pounds.

"Now, fishing enthusiasts from everywhere are converging on this district," says Dr. Prevost. One outfitter in the area told him that each trout caught was worth $500 to him.

"What will happen if there is no control," Dr. Prevost asks. "Inevitably the day will come when a small pailful of minnows will be overturned by mischance, or emptied into the lake by ignorance. The whole district will be ruined because the damages . . . will affect a whole chain of lakes.

"Now try to figure out the cost to the province of that miserable pailful of minnows."

LOVES OUTDOORS

Dr. Prevost is a rugged outdoors man—he goes skiing three times a week in winter — who curbed his own urge to fish by taking up scuba diving.

Underwater, he can follow the fish in their own environment, observe and photograph them and even pick them up.

"There are biologists who fish, I suppose. But I learned early that it's the worst thing that can happen to a biologist. We would just never get any work done."

He says his love of the outdoors comes naturally. A native of Montreal, his family came from St. Jerome in the majestic country north of here.

The St. Jerome Prevosts were known as "lions of the north," Dr. Prevost chuckled, "and I have to live up to that."

The Canadian College of Organists presented the organ to the new Coventry Cathedral, rebuilt after destruction in the Second World War.

BRITISH BOOST BEER DRINKING

LONDON (Reuters) — Britons drank 1,000,000 more barrels of beer, but spent less on their favorite forms of gambling during the year ended March 31, 1962.

The annual reports of the customs and excise department showed betting on the soccer pools reached the lowest level since 1958-59—£92,100,000 ($276,300,000).

Betting on totalizator machines at dog tracks was down nearly 10 per cent to £37,800,000.

However, the alcoholic strength of British beer in 1961-62 was higher and the public seemed to appreciate it. Total consumption was 28,600,000 barrels.

The British also drank 25,000,000 gallons of wine, the highest figure ever.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2♠	Dble.

Opening lead—king of hearts.

This hand occurred in the Los Angeles-New York match in 1960. At the first table, Howard Schenken, of New York, became declarer at two spades doubled. Perhaps West shouldn't have doubled, but it must be admitted the temptation was great.

West cashed a heart and shifted to a club. Declarer took the jack with the king and played the jack of diamonds. East won with the queen and returned a club, taken in dummy.

South ruffed a heart and returned a diamond. West ducked and East took the king and played still another club. West ruffed and led the ace of hearts, South trumping again.

Schenken then ruffed a diamond in dummy and led a trump. East showing out. Now down to four cards, the A-Q-J-9 of spades, he played the jack, and West, with the K-10 - 5-3, could make only one trump trick. So Schenken made two spades doubled.

Alphonse Moyse, Jr., editor of The Bridge World magazine, has this to say when he reported the hand:

"The real hero for New York in this deal, however, was Nick Kahn, East in the other room. The bidding proceeded exactly the same way, with Hirschberg also doubling two spades, but Kahn took the double out to three diamonds, making four.

"This may not be regarded as much of a feat, considering East's distribution, but that hero business still stands. Why? Because nobody in New York or neighboring environs takes Hirschberg out of business doubles! The last time an opponent made a double against him was in 1951—and then only because Hirschberg was upset about the Korean situation.

"Thus, Kahn had to have plenty of moxie, and it was about 40 to 1 he was wrong — that Hirschberg actually had the Q-J-10-9-7 (or possibly the 6) of spades in addition to his outside stuff—and when somebody plays a 40 to 1 shot and hits, he's not only a hero but a genius."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
