Robert Hull Leaves Camp

By JIM CULLEN

Robert Melvin "Bobby" Hull, the perennial super-star of the Chicago Black Hawks left the Hawks training camp to return to his home following a dispute with the management of the Windy City hockey club.

The Hawks have laid down a club rule which prohibits anyone, with the exception of players and team officials, to enter the team's dressing room during training camp sessions. Hull showed up for practice with his two boys and when the management ordered the younger members of the Hull family to leave the dressing room Bobby decided if the youngsters had to go that he was going to leave as well.

The Hawks stated they didn't try very hard to contact Hull in an effort to come back to camp. The feeling of team management on the matter was that it was direct defiance of team policy on Hull's part, as when the club establishes a rule all team members are supposed to abide by it.

This columnist would have to side with the management of the Black Hawks. We don't think a NHL dressing room is any place for a youngster in the first place and secondly if one team member is permitted to violate a team rule then the rule shouldn't be there.

Winston Churchill once said: "Great quarrels, it has been said, often arise from small occasions but never from small causes."

We feel this quote would apply in this particular situation. The feeling here is that there must have been hard feelings between the "Golden Hawk" and the Black Hawk's management over something more serious than the issue presently involved.

If hard feelings between the club and Hull were not there before this incident took place we think that Hull would have been much more agreeable to team policy.

Hull is a trained professional hockey player and knows the value of team spirit. We don't think he would pull up stakes and go home unless there was something of a more serious nature on his mind.

Robert Hull is in our opinion, the best hockey player in the National Hockey League at the present time so we don't expect to see him sit home for long.

If the Hawks and Hull can't smooth over the "ruffles" we don't think the Hawks would have much of a problem in selling the "Golden Hawk" to any of the remaining five clubs in the National League.

Tid Bits From Here And There

High Price, trained and driven by Francis McIssac continued to amaze local harness racing enthusiasts with another double dash victory at the Charlottetown Driving Park Monday night. Francis teamed the five-year-old stallion to two new lifetime marks (2:10.4 and 2:10.2) in the process of capturing the second and sixth dashes on the nine-dash card. This is McIssac's first year as a harness racing driver and he has become well known among the patrons of the Charlottetown raceway as a result of the way he has brought this horse along. The five-year-old Price Tag horse started the summer with a mark of 2:30. High Price is owned by Ray and Larry Davidson, Charlottetown.

The management of the Summerside raceway has another nine dash harness racing program set to leave the wire tonight. The feature class will race in dashes three and seven. Leaving the wire will be Singalong, Irene Mir, Chief's Gal, Donaway and Mountain Marie. Singalong leaving on the rail in the third event will likely be well liked by the patrons of the pari-mutual.

The back nine-holes have been cut out at the Rustico golf club and the management expects to have 18 holes open next spring. The Rustico club has had a most successful year this season with a nine-hole course and they have several improvements planned for next summer.

St. Dunstan's Varsity football team play their second game of the season this Saturday. The Red and White squad will be pitted against Dalhousie on the latter's home field. The Saints were throttled 27-6 in their first league encounter against Acadia last Saturday.

Nine Dash Card To Go Tonight

SUMMERSIDE: Harness racing fans will again see top action at Summerside raceway tonight as Ladd "Boots" Frame has assembled another six classes that will make it hard to pick a winner.

CATCHERS COLLIDE

Minnesota Twins Rookie catcher John Saveik is tagged out at home plate by Baltimore catcher Dick Brown as he tried to score from second base in the third inning of the game last evening. Saveik doubled to start the inning and was caught at home plate when Minnesota moundsman Jim Perry singled to left field.

Lowly Edmonton Eskimos Down First Place Ti-Cats

By BOB TRIMBLE

HAMILTON (CP)—Edmonton Eskimos, in a sharp reversal of form, edged Hamilton Tiger-Cats 9-3 in a bruising Canadian Football League defensive battle Tuesday night before 18,575 fans.

The Eskimos, last in the Western conference, and victims of a 40-1 trouncing three days ago at the hands of Ottawa Rough Riders, never trailed in the interlock battle.

The victory, their fourth in 11 games, broke a two-game losing streak and kept alive Edmonton's slim playoff hopes.

British Tennis In Same State As Canadian

By JIM CONWAY

LONDON (CP)—British tennis seems to be in the same position as its Canadian counterpart—nowhere to go during the winter.

Tennis is a summer sport in Britain. No player in his right mind would try to play outside between October and the spring.

The trouble is that, like Canada, there are few places to play and practise during the winter months.

But there are only 30 full-time tennis courts in the country.

More are used occasionally but belong to the armed services and other organizations which use the halls for other purposes as well.

This compares unfavorably with more than 300 indoor courts in France and 200 in the United States.

New York alone has more than twice as many as the whole of Britain.

Dan Maskell, training manager of the Lawn Tennis Association, believes that more covered courts could change the average Briton's attitude to the game.

He suggests every town should have at least one court where bright youngsters and potential champions could keep in shape out of season.

The problem is financing the construction of a new court, which can cost up to £100,000 ($300,000), and convincing the right peoples to put up the money.

MAKES MONEY

A plan at Stalybridge, Cheshire, is extremely successful. Expedient driver Val Morton borrowed £50,000 in 1963 and built a three-court hangar-shaped enclosure with seating for 2,000 spectators, a first-floor bar with viewing gallery and changing facilities.

He charges $2 an hour for each court, holds professional tournaments and, perhaps most important, makes a profit.

Another court at St. John's Wood, one of 24 around London, is owned by a tennis equipment manufacturer. It charges between $3 and $5 an hour, is open 14 hours a day but only has seating for 20 to 30 people.

The future could lie in relatively inexpensive inflatable plastic covers. The Coolhart Lawn Tennis Club in Finchley, North London, already has one court fitted with a £3,500 transparent envelope which the makers claim will not need maintenance for 10 years.

The only cost is about $2 an hour to keep the air pumps going. Players suffer through an airlock.

The Lawn Tennis Association is making an inquiry into covered courts but it isn't expected to report for some time yet.

The careers of many young players, who have to lay off for the winter or take their turn in the long waiting lists, may depend on large companies or rich tennis clubs taking the initial financial plunge to get more courts working.

Satchel Paige Not Surprised

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Satchel Paige does not feel fortunate at pitching again in major league baseball.

"It was no big deal for me to come back up here, because I had no business being out here," Paige, who has been pitching 40 years, said in an interview.

"You can put it this way, you can say I'm being over-looked by organized baseball all these years while I throw away most of my best years pitching for a barnstorming club."

The Athletics hired Paige 10 days ago for his third stint in the American League.

In his first appearance for the Athletics last Saturday night he held Boston Red Sox scoreless for three innings and allowed only one run.

Paige pitched two seasons with the Cleveland Indians and three with St. Louis until the Browns franchise was transferred to Baltimore in 1954.

During the 1955 season, he posted records of 11-4, 11-8, and 10-2 for Miami Marlins of the International League.

Norris Condones Bob Hull

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Jim Norris, owner of Chicago Black Hawks, said Tuesday that player Bobby Hull is "taking a spoiled boy's attitude toward training rules."

Norris threatened to fine Hull $1,000 a day if he doesn't return to the Hawks National Hockey League training camp within a couple of days, the Miami News said.

Hull, who has asked $100,000 for the coming season, left camp when his two sons, Blake, 5, and Bobby, 4, were barred from the dressing room during the practice.

The News quoted Norris as saying at his Coral Gables home "It's hazardous having little children running all over the place unsupervised during practice. We certainly couldn't make an exception in Hull's case. It looked as if he were trying to call the bluff on our rule."

Norris said also "the economy of our league can't afford that kind of salary. We don't intend to pay him any $100,000."

Saskatchewan Roughies Aided By Two Archers

REGINA (CP)—A couple of guys named Archer, both of whom claim to be descended from Robin Hood, are playing a major role in helping the "poor" Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference.

They are Roy (Sandy) Archer, a 45-year-old physiotherapist in his 15th season as trainer, and Charles (Hincley) Archer, 52, a self-confessed "all-around sportsman" who has handled chores as equipment manager for the last five seasons.

Not related to one another, the only common bond between them are the Roughriders and, of course, Robin Hood. Hincley takes the latter quite seriously, although Sandy isn't too sure of his family's connection.

The "poor little old Saskatchewan Roughriders"—a reputation they built up over the lean years of the 1950's—have needed plenty of help this season, and Sandy and Hincley have been the main cogs in providing it.

They have two players, linebacker Bob Ptacek and veteran middle guard Ron Atchison out for the season, and at one time had six players on the injured list.

HARD HIT BY INJURIES Hincley's job is just as tough. It's up to him to see that players are properly equipped in the first place to minimize the possibility of injuries.

A physiotherapist who spent five years in the army's medical corps during the war and 10 years in practice before joining the Roughriders, Sandy has the knowledge and equipment to handle most of "the slow-down injuries."

"Those are injuries where a fellow can still walk, and still play, but this year we've had two out for the season and several in casts, and there's not too much you can do about those."

Sandy also has spent 16 seasons as trainer for the Regina Pats hockey club, now a member of the Saskatchewan Junior League. He was known as one of Western Canada's finest softball pitchers during the 1940s and '50s.

He says some of the better football players go through half their careers playing with injuries that the public never hears about. "They've got guts—they really hurt."

"There are more guys playing football with injuries than in any other sport. The pressure is on them to win in this game, and many feel they have to play when they are hurt."

"Guys like Atchison, Bill Clarke, Reg Whitehouse, Larry Isbell, Ken Carpenter and lots of others wouldn't miss a game unless they couldn't walk."

FORGOT HELMET For Sandy, training is a year-round proposition. "With hockey and football, I just haven't time for private practice any more."

Hincley holds down a full-time position with the Riders, working in the office during the winter. Looking after equipment for an entire modern football team is no small job.

"The biggest problem to face is players who forget to take equipment with them," he says. "Helmets are specially-fitted things, and players can't just play with any old helmet these days. Last year Wayne Shaw forgot his helmet before the second playoff game in Calgary."

Veteran Tommy-Joe Coffey of Edmonton Eskimos was the only player to make a move in the Western Football Conference individual scoring race Tuesday as the Eskimos stopped Hamilton Tiger-Cats 9-3 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game.

The versatile end and place kicker picked up a single and a convert to boost his season total to 39 points, to move to within two points of fourth place Lovell Cleman of Calgary Stampeders. Edmonton's other points came by way of a touchdown by quarterback Randy Kerbow and a single by Jim Mitchell, both out of contention in the WFC top ten.

Three Players Share Lead

HALIFAX (CP)—Three players share the lead in the Atlantic Football Conference scoring race as the second half of the schedule approaches.

Hughie Grant of Halifax Buccaneers, 1964 scoring champion of the conference's "B" section, Ed McClure of Dartmouth Vikings and Terry Ward of Lancaster Tiacas each have 12 points on two touchdowns.

In fourth place with seven points is Dick Clapp of Shearwater Navy.

Nine players are next with six points.

John Surtees To Race Again

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Paul McGoe, chief surgeon of Scarborough General Hospital, said Tuesday there is no reason why John Surtees, 1964 world champion racing driver who was seriously injured Friday, should not race again.

Hospital officials said Surtees is in excellent condition following a mi or operation Monday to improve the position of his dislocated pelvis.

Dr. McGoe said Surtees' general condition is improving steadily and he is asking when he can go home. Officials said he could leave the hospital in "several weeks."

Surtees suffered two fractures and a dislocation of the hips, fractures of the horizontal segments of four vertebrae in the lowerback and kidney and other internal injuries when he was pinned under his Lola 80 after it lost a wheel and crashed on the track at Mosport Park, 40 miles east of here.

"We're entirely convinced the team's showing was more than satisfactory for a first attempt," said Luke Moys, immediate past president of the CABA.

The Canadian team was assembled after only a three-week camp at the University of B.C., and managed to compile a 7-7 record during games in Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico.

"This year's tour was more or less a testing ground," Moys said. "In 1966 we'll have more time to prepare a team and a better selection of players to choose from."

National Team Deemed Success

VANCOUVER (CP)—Phase one in a project designed to develop an effective Canadian national basketball squad for the 1967 Pan-American Games at Winnipeg and the 1968 Olympics has been deemed a success.

"The Canadian Amateur Basketball Association's first step ahead in the project Monday after listening to a report on the Canadian team's tour of South America.

"We're entirely convinced the team's showing was more than satisfactory for a first attempt," said Luke Moys, immediate past president of the CABA.
