are dangerous; they weaken the constitution, inflame the lungs, and often lead to Pneumonia. Cough syrups are useless. The system must be given strength and force to throw off the disease.

Scott's Emulsion will do this. It strengthens the lungs and builds up the entire system. It conquers the inflammation, cures the cough, and prevents serious trouble.

The Transvaal War

RECEPTION OF JACK TARS.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION IN LONDON.

The annals of service demonstrations probably show nothing to parallel the enthusiasm with which the naval heroes of Ladysmith, the officers and crew of the British first class cruiser Powerful, were greeted in London. The scenes in the streets were remarkable and inspiring. The whole route was a floating mass of color and the enthusiasm displayed was of the most frantic character. The flags of all nations, banners and mottoes formed an almost continuous canopy for Captain Lambton and the contingent of the Powerful to pass under. Stands were erected at all the points of vantage, the houses were crowded with sight-seers, viewing with one another in honor the gallant sailors. There was one continuous roar of greeting, waving of handkerchiefs, flags and hats as the naval brigade, with the khaki colored guns marched from the depot to the Horse Guards' parade, where the Prince of Wales, in the uniform of an admiral of the fleet, accompanied by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. George J. Goschen, and a number of high naval and military officers, inspected the blue jackets.

They were surrounded by thousands of privileged guests who so warmly applauded the defenders of Ladysmith, but whose reception of the sailors in no way equalled the intense enthusiasm displayed in the streets.

After the inspection by the Prince of Wales and others, the parade formed a square with the officers in the centre and the First Lord of the Admiralty and the Prince of Wales spoke briefly in terms of admiration of the work and valor of the seamen and officers, and then Mr. Goschen individually introduced them to the Prince of Wales, who shook hands with them and said a few words to each.

The Princes of Wales introduced Captain Lambton to the Princess of Wales and the brigade was afterward entertained at luncheon, preparatory to marching through the city. After the men sat down to luncheon the Prince of Wales, the Princes of Wales, Mr. Goschen, and others traversed the rooms and were heartily cheered.

Around the Mason House the jackies' admirers were clustered in numbers that all business was suspended. From all parts of the country men and women had come and they were determined to get a glimpse of Captain Lambton, his tiny midshipmen and the trusty tars, and so they struggled to get on lampposts and window ledges and forced their way into private offices. There they waited patiently until an occasional cheer broke into a roar, announcing the coming of the sailors. Captain Lambton, riding, wearing a cocked hat, followed 100 mounted policemen, who had to prepare the route. Behind Captain Lambton was the blue-clad Coldstream Guard's band, after which came the blue-jackets. Amid thunderous cheering and the waving of flags from several hundred thousand people they entered the Royal Exchange and sat down to tea. This finished, they marched back to the station in the evening and returned to Portsmouth.

HUMBLE SERVITORS OF THE QUEEN.

The question of remounts is at present being greatly agitated. How much they were needed is vividly proved by the account of The Daily Telegraph's military correspondent at Stellenbosch. He was ordered to inspect horses returned from the front and report if any or how many were again fit for service. He thus describes the result of his inspection:—
I will attempt no vividly drawn picture. But had you seen those bags of bones looming through the twilight, on their way to the morning feed, it would have started you no less than it did me—and would have brought before you, more than any sight not actually in the fighting line could have done, the horrors of war. I take it for granted that you have sympathies for the horse as well as for the men. The less discrepancy among this awful band of skeletons had been back from the front about a month, the worst cases about a fortnight—representing, with others I was yet to see, in great part the remnant of General French's good cavalry chargers, with which he forced his way to Kimberley. How these ragged frame works still supported life, even on the improved diet of their present quarters, was in itself a marvel. Yet most of them moved forward, some even blithely, to their food—squeezing their gaunt, projecting hips into the crush along the feeding trough. Some few still bore signs of wounds scarce healed. Their destraintment at Picquetberg road must have been a terrible experience. Several were dead in the train, light dead at the station, a few more on the way to the farm, while on most days afterward one or more would succumb from sheer weakness. If it be true that the convoy of 120 wagons, captured by the Boers on Riet River, contained the forage intended for the cavalry force, and that upward of fifty hours afterwards the horses of the force had to continue their march without any nourishment whatever, no wonder they fell down to die by the roadside in hundreds, or that this great deed of the relief of Kimberley was costly to a degree that makes one shudder for very pity for the poor animals that had to be sacrificed.

Gentlemen,—While driving down a very steep hill last August my horse stumbled and fell, cutting himself fearfully about the head and body. I used MINARD'S LINIMENT freely on him and in a few days he was as well as ever.

It was the same at the next farm, and at the third. I care not to call up the remembrance of those angular, almost transparent, frames and tottering limbs. Of the whole six hundred only four could be found against whose hoof numbers one could write "Fit for service." Of the others not half are likely to do service again for her Majesty. The remainder, it is pleasing to know, are revelling among streams of cold water, in wide, if not very luxuriant, pasture, and twice a day come to the troughs for what the Americans term "a good square meal." For my humble part, I should venture to consider the meal both better and squarer if its component parts were more suited to digestive organs already enfeebled by starvation. Wheat, eight pounds, and straw chaff unlimited (as per contract), are hardly calculated to coax back flesh and stamina exhausted by prolonged fatigue and hunger. But this point, I have reason to believe, has been duly presented in the proper quarter, and is likely to be remedied. For—it is satisfactory to add—out of about one hundred and fifty similar cases arriving at Stellenbosch camp a month or five weeks ago, and there fed freely from linseed, bran and oats, more than forty have already returned to the front in tolerable working condition. I now quit this rather sad subject.

PRETORIA'S WEAK DEFENCES.

Suffering caused by Piles

Is Quickly Ended when

Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is applied

Besides the intense agony caused by the itching, burning sensations of piles, there are other symptoms which produce restlessness and at times excruciating pains known only to the victim of piles.
What would one give to be free of this terrible disease? And yet there is a cure—a positive cure—which does not cost much and is not painful or difficult to apply.
Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is, so far as is known, the only absolute cure for blind, itching, bleeding and protruding piles. It gives relief at the first application and affords a perfect cure in the most aggravated cases.
Mr. Isaac Foster, Erieview, Ont., says: "I was troubled with itching piles for two years and could not sleep at night. I was half-crazed and tried everything. Finally seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised I tried it and found it good. After a second application I found relief, and one large box cured me. Have never been bothered since, and I can recommend it to all suffering from the same trouble."
Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers, or Edmansons, Bates & Co., Toronto.

making and repairing guns and manufacturing projectiles and powder. Despite the four strong forts around the city he does not believe that the burghers will be able to defend Pretoria long. He records an interview with President Kruger, who had just returned from the Free State. He says the president looked very old and broken. He was suffering from an affliction of the eyes, which he kept closed. He said scarcely anything, but suddenly exclaimed: "What can we poor Boers do? The English have a hundred thousand soldiers in one place, forty thousand in another and thirty thousand in an other. Now they send thirty thousand Kaffirs against us."
