THE DAILY EXAMINER

MARCH 28 1899.

A MODERN INSTANCE.

A new lighthouse was erected at Wood Islands in September, 1876, and upon the recommendation of Hon. David Laird the Mackenzie Government appointed Mr. James McMillan keeper at a salary of $200 a year. Mr. McMillan was an active supporter of the Liberal Government until his death. His friend made several applications to the Mackenzie Government for an increase in his salary in order that he might, in this particular, be even with other light keepers. But the expected measure of success did not attend their efforts.

In 1878, however, when the Government of Sir John A. Macdonald came into power, the late Hon. J. C. Pope, who became Minister of Marine, acknowledged Mr. McMillan's claim and $50 was added to his salary.

Mr. McMillan continued to support the Liberal party, and after his death in December, 1886, his family was left in the lighthouse. In June of that year, Mr. D. McMillan, son of the late keeper, was appointed to the position, and remained in the lighthouse with his widowed mother under Conservative rule.

But when the Liberals came into power in 1896, a change came over the scene. The "healers" of the party had to be provided for, and demands were made for dismissals. Young McMillan, the light-keeper, never polled a vote in his life until the last Dominion election; and he had not even attended a political meeting for many years. In June, 1897, an investigation was held. It was thought that nothing was proved; for by Order-in-Council of March 30th, 1898, young McMillan was appointed a fishery overseer for Queen's County, the duties of which position were to be performed in connection with the light. By Order-in-Council of September 12th, 1898, however, young McMillan was dismissed (although the light house was reported to be one of the best kept in the province) and the widow of a man who had fought many a hard battle for the Liberals in days gone by, as well as her son, was turned out,—the present Minister of Marine evidently forgetting past support of himself and his now aged father by the late husband and father.

The cruel treatment in this case, as well as in others, shows the character of the powers that be. It shows that Liberal rule is subservient to the holders and those who hold the patronage. The dismissal of a faithful and efficient officer had to be made to make room for the nominee of Messrs. Welsh, Forbes and McDonald,—a man who is said to be sixty years of age—in violation of the rule laid down by Sir Louis, that appointees to such positions should be younger men.

First, Second, Third.

A correspondent calls attention to the various methods of abbreviating "second" and "third." His position seems to be correct, and the use which he recommends should prevail. Wherewithal, he says, are "overwhelmingly in favor of 2d and 3d, instead of 2nd and 3rd."

In the case of "first," the word stem seems to be fir. This is supplied by the figure 1, and the abbreviated form is 1st. In the case of "second," the word stem is secon, which is supplied by the figure 2, giving us 2d. In "third," the word stem is thir, which gives us 3d for the other form.—Living Church.

STOMACH FILLED WITH COBBLE STONES

Strange Sensation Felt by Many Victims of Dyspepsia.

Neither Pleasure nor Nourishment Obtained From Their Food—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Remedy the Trouble—Make New Blood, Build New Bone and Sinew.

Cobble stones are just as enjoyable to the dyspeptic as is the dainties and most enjoyable and nourishing food.

Every morsel he eats lies on his stomach a hard lump, causing a dull, aching pain, that lasts from one meal time to another, and making the victim utterly unfit for work, pleasure, or even for mingling with his fellowmen.

The blood becomes thin, weak and watery; it carries no nourishment to the organs, and tissues. Then a process of slow decay begins. The flesh grows soft

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—It is reported that the plains of Abraham have been staked out into building lots, and unless somebody comes to Quebec's rescue one of its chief show places will be presently turned into back-yard and that sort of thing. It is a case of speak soon or forever repent.

—As to prohibition Mr Foster says: "This robbery, this delusion, this fraud this incubus upon the country, this worsted slavery and bondage has been annihilated to the extent of from 3-100 of 1 per cent. to 1-100 of 1 per cent. But the whole tariff of my hon. friend is modelled upon a principle that there shall be ample protection to the industries of this country, and that is based on the principle of protection as it was before."

—A modus vivendi is now talked of in regard to the Alaskan boundary, which Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not settle on his long visit to Washington. The Montreal Gazette remarks that such an arrangement, while not depriving either country of anything that may subsequently be declared to belong to it, offers a means of averting dangerous conflicts in connection with matters of international dispute which there is not time or opportunity to permanently adjust at once. That there is the possibility of angry dispute in connection with the Alaskan boundary official correspondence published at Washington proves. A modus vivendi is the interest of both countries.

Rhodes Scheme.

LONDON, March 25.—Considerable discussion is reported between the Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Michael Hicks Beach, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the former opposing, and the latter favouring, the African schemes of Mr. Cecil Rhodes. The Mail and Chronicle says: "We understand that Mr. Rhodes has sent the Government a virtual ultimatum, asking whether it intends to accede to his request to guarantee the interest on the Tanganyika section of the Cape-to-Cairo railway, failing which he intends to lay the situation before the chartered shareholders."

When Free Born Men Cannot Speak Free

BERLIN, March 25.—The Prussian Government has been proceeding vigorously of late against Polish agitators in the Province of Posen. Herr Chuloter, editor of the Weekly Praca, has just been condemned to pay the fine of $190 for publishing in his paper two Polish patriotic poems. In the city of Posen 2,000 Poles have just held an indignation meeting to protest against the latest administrative measure, which provides a mulct of $25 for every Polish gentleman who shall teach the Polish language gratuitously. The gathering unanimously resolved to send a petition to the Government praying that the decree be rescinded.

Free From Plague.

LONDON, March 25.—A despatch from Port Louis, Mauritius, says it is believed there that the plague has been thoroughly stamped out of the island. Clear bills of health are now being issued.

ESTEEMED EXCHANGES.

Montreal Gazette: Great Britain has come well out of the Sudan negotiation, having retained Darfur, as well as the Bah-el Ghazal. France will have commercial access to the Nile, but no territorial rights. She will also have the desert of Sahara, but it is not likely that she will be able to make much out of it.

Montreal Star: Now that Sir Wilfrid has openly discarded unrestricted reciprocity, will he frankly admit that the free trade of this country is not in favor of free trade and is in favour of protection, the policy so strongly condemned by the Liberals while in Opposition.

THE DANGER OF BEAUTY.

I never read the papers without feeling so content That both my eyes are twisted and my nose is slightly bent. I'm glad my mouth is out of line and that my teeth are few. And if I had a "wealth of hair" I don't know what I'd do.

A "tiny foot" or "illy hand" would fill me with dismay, And if I had a slender waist I'd sicken in a day. For I have noticed from the first, as strange as it may seem, The girl who gets the worst of it is "lovely as a dream."

The papers never tell about a woman being shot, Or mangled by a trolley car, or married to a sot, Or forced at point of pistol her last fifty cents to lose, But that her eyes are "limpid" and her boots are number twos.

So I can live in sweet content, without the slightest fear That trouble or calamity will ever hover near, And when I see my misfit face it's some relief to know That I'll outlive the beauties by a hundred years or so!

MAKE THE MEN MARKET.

A Woman Writer's Bold Suggestion to Help Weary Wives.

There are few things that exhaust a woman more than a day's shopping. The average man looks upon a woman's "purchasing day" as one of pleasure, but when he accompanies her on one of these shopping expeditions he goes home, after his patience has been all exhausted, with a different belief. He learns, too, that a woman can endure vexations and disappointments with much more equanimity than he can, and he mentally vows never to do it again.

The number of miles traversed is really what tires one, and it is little wonder that the woman who does the shopping for herself and her entire family, as well as the marketing and the bargaining with the "butcher and baker and candlestick maker," should feel the need of rest for her tired nerves.

The man of the house should always do the marketing. In the old days, when the butler was not the stately personage he is now, women were never troubled with the worries of household purchasing, for the head of the house did the entire buying, and "James" carried the parcels and was not ashamed to do it.

No mother who has the care of little children should give the precious morning hours to anything else but the nursery, nor should she let butchers' and grocers' boys call for and deliver orders, because there is sure to be dissatisfaction if she does. Some wealthy families allow their chef to take charge of the household, and he collects a large percentage from the tradesmen, which, of course, is added to the monthly bill. Reputable storekeepers will not do this kind of business, however, and the chef "patronage" is controlled entirely by a few men. On the whole, it is much more satisfactory for the man of the house to do the marketing. He will get the best meat, have his orders promptly attended to and save about 25 per cent in the transaction, as well as the health of his wife.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Truth and Fiction.

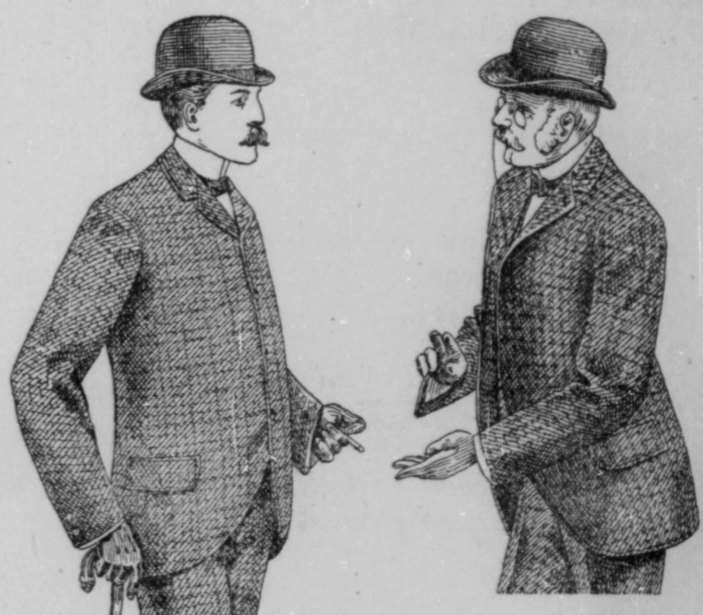

"Struwelpeter," one of the pictures, represents a little maiden, supine in bed, very ill—and no wonder—with an immense cherry tree growing out of her mouth. This was the sad result of swallowing the stones along with the fruit, in spite of all warnings. But we all know that truth is stranger than fiction, and the Petersburgskaya Gazeta of June 26 and July 8, 1897, quotes the following exemplification of this saying from the foreign papers:

"A little girl 7 years of age, Amelia L., whose father worked at the sawmills in Belgard (Ain), was at play the other day, when she managed to push the seed of a plane tree deep into her ear. Shortly after she began to experience acute pains, and it was found that the seed had taken root in the waxy secretions of the ear and was growing apace. The father proceeded to cautiously uproot the intrusive plant, and the girl has now recovered."

If this story is true, it is to be hoped that Miss Amelia L., now that her ear is once more free and in working order, will incline it to hearken to the exhortations of her elders and will not go on planting plane trees in such obviously uncongenial soil.—Notes and Queries.

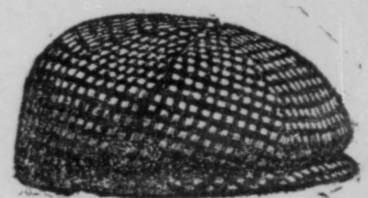

Position in Society.

To all those who spend their time wondering how other people live we would suggest that an examination of the plaintiff's petition in the case of Schneider versus Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, might throw some light on the subject. It was a suit under a civil damage act, and the plaintiff alleged in her petition that she "was the wife of one Zimri Hosier, on whose good conduct, frugality and personal labor she was dependent for the support of herself and their seven minor children, for the proper culture and moral training of the latter, and, to a good extent, for her own position in society. The said Zimri Hosier, when not intoxicated or laboring under the effects of intoxication, was an industrious laboring man and regularly earned and received for his labor $1.50 a day." There's management for a year. Seven children and a wife supported, the children properly cultured and morally trained and the wife's position in society maintained—all on $1.50 a day. Perhaps there may have been extenuating circumstances in the intoxication of Zimri.—Law Notes.
