

Peter Makes A Good Guess

Not only is it always right, but also says to be polite. —Old Mother Nature. Peter Rabbit had left the dear old Briar-Patch and had started for the Old Orchard. Then he changed his mind. He would go over to the Smiling Pool. It was quite a while since he had been over there.

Once he heard the voice of Hooty the Owl. At once he flattened himself down in the grass. Mistress Moon was shining her brightest and Peter knew the wonderful eyes of Hooty could see a long distance. He waited until he heard Hooty again. This time the sound was fainter. It meant Hooty was far away. Peter hopped up and hurried on his way.

Lipperty, lipperty, lip ran Peter across the Green Meadows.

He had a special reason for going over to that part of the Green Meadows. Almost on the edge of the Smiling Pool was a bed of sweet clover. Peter loved that bed that bed of sweet clover belonged to him. Of course it didn't. It didn't belong to anybody unless it was Farmer Brown. But Peter had visited it so many times that he really felt it belonged to him.

As Peter drew near that bed of clover he stopped abruptly and sat up. Somebody was climbing up out of the Smiling Pool right where that bed of clover was. At first Peter thought it might be Jerry Muskrat. Then all in a flash he knew better. This was not Jerry Muskrat unless Jerry had grown to be several times the size he used to be. Peter kept perfectly still and watched. The big stranger came up over the edge of the bank. Then Peter saw the big stranger's tail. Never had he seen such a tail. It was big and thick and broad and flat. The stranger sat up for a minute, just as Peter sits up. That big tail lay flat on the ground almost like a brace.

Peter had heard about that tail. He had heard about that stranger that looked like a giant muskrat. Blacky the Crow had told of seeing Paddy the Beaver up in his pond in the Green Forest. Peter guessed that this stranger must be Paddy or one of Paddy's family. Of course it was Paddy who had come down Laughing Brook on his way to the Big River.

Peter was uncertain. He really knew nothing at all about Paddy the Beaver. He was uncertain whether to be afraid or not. He was afraid. Paddy lifted his head and Peter got a glimpse of Paddy's big orange-colored cutting teeth and right away Peter decided to be polite. It wouldn't do to be impolite to anyone with such
