THE FARM TEAM.

A Paper Read Before the Ohio State Institute upon the Education of a Useful Team.

With the vast majority of farmers a colt that is bridled is broken. That is considered the beginning and ending of the colt's education. I hold that to be in the colt's education only what reading is to the boys—a means that makes education possible. The colt is that has learned nothing except that you can control him. That is of foremost importance for a serviceable horse, but if we never take him beyond this in his lessons we realize only one half his worth as an animal of service. The contrast is no greater between the hireling who must be directed in the details of every task and the farm foreman who can carry on the work without the presence of the proprietor than that between the bridled horse and the trained horse. I believe most thoroughly in skilled labor in horses as well as men. Hence, as teaching him to work is only in a part of his education, I am in no hurry to hitch him beside another horse. Indeed, the stable is the proper place to give him much of his education. It is the best place because you can there better control him.

From the primary room, the box stall, pass him to the next room, the single stall. There teach him to step over sideways from either side and teach him to move backward. Do not depend upon his learning this from being moved to or three times a day, but repeat the lessons in rapid succession for half an hour or longer if necessary until it is thoroughly learned. Remember to use the one word "back," and that only, adding clearness of articulation and force of tone instead of unholly expletives. After he has once backed out quiet him if he has become excited and lead him again into the stall and repeat. Keep this up until he will step backward freely at the word, when the lesson will be learned for life and all circumstances, and will be of immeasurable value to you a million times should you both live long enough. He should then be taught to back at the command when you are behind or not even near him. This lesson should be continued into the higher room, which may be the barn floor or a shed similar in size. Here he should be taught to step backward rapidly across the apartment, then to advance to you, to turn to the right and to the left and to go from this to his own stall. All this may easily be taught him during the winter before he is old enough to go to work. These lessons will be of great value in themselves, but of greater value in teaching the horse to obey at the word of command. The culmination of training is to bring the horse to act at the word rather than to wait for traction upon the lines and the stroke of the whip.

Decide which side your colt is to work upon before he is hitched with another horse, then put him to work there from the first so that the habit of coming to the tongue upon one side will be fixed as soon as possible. This will save time and much annoyance occasioned by the untrained horse getting on the wrong side of the tongue. Another important factor in making a team pleasant and efficient at their work lies in keeping the same two horses together so that they may understand each other: each will know just how quickly the other is going to start and each will know the strength of the other. Of course the team should be well mated as to temperament, size, strength and speed. As a matter of satisfaction I would have them mate in color and carriage. It is desirable to have them near the same age that they may be kept together for many years. I protest against the frequent changing of horses simply for the sake of changing or trying to beat the other fellow.

No other business man has greater need of a first class team than the farmer, and no other has so good an opportunity to get and keep a first-class team; still the farm teams of the country are not the credit to the profession. It is only a new application of the truth expressed in the adage, "The shoemaker's wife goes barefooted." With the variety and abundance of feeds upon our farms our horses generally show neglect and unwise care. Farmers generally do not know that the horse's stomach normally holds only three gallons and they attempt to crowd a two bushel bushel of hay into him and then allow him to drink four or five gallons of water on top of it. The horse, of all animals, except the hog, needs concentrated food. He should never be compelled to live upon hay nor should he be fed more at a time than he will eat up in thirty minutes—even less than that at morning and noon feeds when at hard work. This should be preceded by watering. But should be given before feeding grain. A light feed with time to digest it is better than a heavy one without time for digestion. Let the heaviest feed of the day be given at the close of the day's work. Never give a larger feed than usual just before a hard day's work or drive.

Water frequently but not in large quantities. In the hot days of summer when a man desires to drink about every hour it is cruelty to compel the team to go without from one feed to another. Contrive in some way to get them water more frequently, if in no other way haul it to the field with you. I want to say with emphasis that a horse never gets too hot to drink a few swallows. Everyone knows that the horse that has stood idle for some weeks or even days cannot endure so much exercise as though he had regular daily work yet few realize the extent to which this is true. Very many horses are overtaxed the first week of spring work. Make it a business to give every horse intended for spring work some work during the winter.

The mistaken kindness that works the greatest injury to the horse and lessens his ability for service is that of allowing him to cool off during the day. A horse that has been made to sweat profusely at his work should not be allowed to rest so long at a time that perspiration will cease. Stop often rather than long. The race-horse man never lets his charge cool off after he has warmed him in the morning until after the race is over. If he did he might as well keep out of the race.

One other practice of many farmers is to be discouraged—that of turning their horses into the field at night as soon as the pastures start in the spring. Allow him a little grass daily as an appetizer, but do not allow him to gorge himself with it. If now you will act upon my suggestions I will dismount and leave my hobby-horse with you.

Proving the Value of Dodd's Kidney Pills in Kidney Disease.

LONDON, March 20.—Mr. Charles Dean, stableman at the City Hotel, comes forward to add his quota to the mass of evidence in favor of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Dean states that he had for three years suffered from severe cutting pains in the small of his back. At times they were so great that he had to lie down to get relief.

Several remedies were used without benefit. A doctor prescribed for him, saying his kidneys were affected, but no good resulted.

Finally he took a friend's advice and used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The usual result followed. Three boxes cured him out and out.

Chronic Eczema Cured.

William Thistle, registrar, of Hartland also certifies that he did not know of Dr. Chase's Ointment which cured Grace Ella.

According to a Toronto despatch Premier Laurier has notified Mr. Spence of the Dominion Alliance that the vote in favor of prohibition did not represent such a proportion of the electorate as would justify the introduction by the government of a prohibitory law. The government decision is, it is unnecessary to say, unsatisfactory and displeasing to the friends of prohibition.

Tailor-Made vs. Factory-Made!

Take up the printed announcements of makers and importers of ready-made clothing, and when they strive to give emphasis to the alleged merits of their clothing they invariably tell how nearly they approach to tailor-made. Here are some quotations—

'Elegantly tailored' Cut and finished equal to ordered work,' Equal in quality, fit, and finish to suits made to order, or similar statements.

Then tailor-made clothes are different to imported factory-made, otherwise there would be no need to make comparisons. If tailor-made were not the better clothes they would not be held up as the ideal to which the ready-made strive to reach.

The fact is there is a great deal of difference between a factory-made imported suit and a tailor-made in style and durability.

The man that is indifferent as to the appearance of his clothes when he buys them and when worn a month, may be satisfied with a factory-made, but if he has regard to looks and economy, he will buy tailor-made garments.

For those who are not disposed to give the prices usually paid for clothes made to special order, and are not satisfied with the imported ready-made clothing, we have made, and are daily adding, Suits and Overcoats of superior workmanship that we are selling as low in price as imported makes of inferior quality.
