Summer Pruning the Raspberry.

In the spring of 1892 an experiment was started at the Wisconsin agricultural experiment station to determine the effects of summer-pruning upon the growth and fruiting of the raspberry plant. This experiment was continued through the season of 1895, but as a portion of the plants in the meantime were attacked by the disease known as curl leaf the results were not regarded as sufficiently conclusive for publication, and the work is to be repeated.

A few points were, however, clearly brought out in this experiment, one of which is the evidence that summer pruning tends to increase the number of canes, both in the red and black raspberry. When the plants in the differently pruned rows were dug out in the spring of 1896, the crowns were noticeably different in the number of stumps whence canes had been cut off in the annual removal of the dead fruiting branches, and in the thinning out of the young canes to a definite number. The stumps were more numerous in the pruned rows. In one series the canes had been pinched twice each season—that is, the primary shoot was pinched at the height of 12 to 18 inches, and the lateral shoots that appeared later were pinched about 12 inches from the main stem. In these twice pinched plants the increase in the number of stumps was marked. In the once pinched plants the difference was manifest, but to a less degree.—E. S. Goff in Garden and Forest.

Bricks From Sand.

By a new process bricks are to be made from sand. The materials, which are held together by a preparation which acts as a bond during the annealing process, which is conducted under a very high temperature. Various advantages are claimed for these new bricks. They are much stronger, having a crushing strength of as high as 45,000 pounds to the square inch, a cost of about three-fifths of ordinary brick, much less time required in their manufacture, and a great reduction in the quantity of fuel needed in their burning. With these advantages there are likely to be brick yards springing up wherever there is a demand for first class building materials that can be furnished at a reasonable price. Brick and stone houses are by many persons liked better than wood, but brick and stone are more expensive and therefore out of the reach of the many who would prefer them. If sand can be made into bricks, a great building problem is solved in a manner eminently satisfactory.—New York Ledger.

A Colonial Relic.

A colonial relic of more than ordinary interest and value is now in the possession of Charles Patton Dimitry of New Orleans. It is the will of George Ludlowe, brother of Robert Ludlowe, deputy governor of Massachusetts and Connecticut from 1639 to 1634, and attached to it is a codicil bequeathing to the testator's nephew Thomas certain property in Virginia, "together with a sixteenth part of the ship 'Mayflower.'" The will is dated Oct. 23, 1635, and is one of the very few authentic and original documents now in existence that mention the famous vessel of the pilgrims. Mr. Dimitry inherited this and other papers almost as important from his mother, who before her marriage was Mary Powell Mills of Washington and belonged to a Virginian family that traced a direct descent from General John Smith, a colonel in the Revolutionary war and member of congress. It is said that Joseph Jefferson has persuaded Mr. Dimitry that the will should be deposited in Boston with the Bradford "History of Plymouth."—New York Times.

Successful Negro Farmer.

Barton E. Powell of Albany, Ga., a negro 32 years old, is one of the most successful farmers in the state. Twelve years ago he had saved up $2,000, with which he bought 500 acres of land. He went to work on it and cleared $2,500 the first year. He has continued to add to his landed possessions, paying spot cash for every farm purchased, and is now the owner of 2,100 acres of land, from which he markets 400 bales of cotton annually. Besides his success on the farm he has developed the country supply store idea, and thus rakes in thousands of dollars a year. He also owns a comfortable residence in Bainbridge. His profits last year were over $1,000. He says that the question of social recognition doesn't trouble him so long as he can get financial recognition at the bank.—Exchange.

A Great Catalogue.

It is said the great catalogue of books which the British museum has in process of compilation will be completed within a year or two. This work will contain a list of nearly all the books that have ever been published. One hundred and ten years ago the museum completed its first catalogue. It consisted of two volumes folio in manuscript. In 1819 this catalogue had grown to eight volumes. A new edition was commenced in the thirties. Only the first letter was printed, the rest being written. It was completed in 1851, and consisted of 160 folio volumes. In 1875 the list had grown to 2,000 and five years later to 3,000 volumes. The new edition, commenced in 1881, will be printed, and it is to consist of 600 volumes, containing a list of 3,000,000 titles.—Chicago Record.

The Garter For Gladstone.

It is said that though Mr. Gladstone has declined to be raised to the peerage the queen will signalize the sixtieth anniversary of her accession to the crown by appointing the "grand old man" a knight of the garter. He may accept this honor, as it will still enable him to go down to posterity as a great commoner, while it is a unique distinction in the reign of her majesty and has not been granted to any save princes and peers since the day of Sir Robert Walpole.
