

Hail T.U.C. Move To Head Off Strikes At Early Stage

By RON EVANS
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—British newspapers Thursday hailed a step in the right direction the proposal by leaders of the giant Trades Union Congress to ask its 8,000,000 members for permission to intervene early in industrial disputes.

Members of the TUC's general council told Labor Minister Sir Walter Monckton at a meeting Wednesday they plan to seek powers of intervention at the annual congress in September. They hope to change the TUC ruling which prevents it from stepping into disputes before negotiations break down.

"It is certainly time the general council reviewed its position as the central organ of the trade union movement," says the Manchester Guardian, an independent Liberal paper.

"Industrial relations do not appear as a desperate battleground between the children of light and the wicked capitalists. The causes of friction are too often to be found among the children of light themselves. The TUC should be helped to save them from themselves and the rest of us from the consequences of their folly."

TIRED OF STRIKES

The right-wing Daily Telegraph says: "We are tired of daily strikes. And it really does not take much intelligence to see that early and sympathetic advice from the sidelines might easily put an end to many of them, even before they begin."

The Financial Times, though it calls the move an advance which will make easier to settle industrial disputes without strikes, sounds a more moderate note.

"The record of the TUC as a mediator is not indeed all that impressive," says the Conservative paper.

"Therefore while the good of fices of the TUC are useful and the new regulation will probably make them more effective this cannot be looked on as in any sense a new answer to the problem of labor disputes."

Supreme Court At Georgetown

Justice George J. Tweedy presided at the final sitting of the Supreme Court at Georgetown yesterday. Only one case was remaining on the docket.

The Queen, respondent, represented by Mr. S. S. Hession, Q.C., versus William Harold Butler, Gaspereux, appellant. The appeal was from a conviction and fine of $100.00 and costs in the Magistrate's Court on a charge of possession of quantity of wash suitable for the distillation of spirits.

The appeal was dismissed, and the conviction upheld. The accused was fined $100.00 and costs or three months in jail.

90TH BIRTHDAY

Mr. James Landrigan, well known schoolteacher of yesterday, received congratulations on July 27th on the occasion of his 90th birthday anniversary. The happy event was marked by a family dinner at the home of his son, P.J. and Mrs. Landrigan, 40 School St. Seated at dinner besides the host and hostess were the guest of honor, his daughter, Miss Ethel Landrigan, R.N. of a Boston hospital, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura McEncrow and her husband Jim McEncrow of Shediac, N.B., his brother-in-law, Fred G. Kelly, City, his grand-daughter, Eileen Savoie and her husband Rene Savoie of Shipigan, N.B., and his niece Mary McIntyre of Boston. After dinner Mr. Landrigan played a rubber of bridge, one of his favorite pastimes. During the afternoon he enjoyed a visit to the Rifle Range where in former years he was a top marksman and where his son and grandsons are still upholding the honor of the Landrigan family at rifle meets.

Mr. Landrigan is well known throughout the Province having taught school in Gowan Brae, Souris, Tignish, Miscouche, Kensington and Queen Square School, Charlottetown.

He introduced quite a number of innovations in teaching methods viz: report cards, Palmer method training and beautification of school grounds. For a number of years he was manager of the Government School Supply and later operated a farm at Shediac, N.B. Numerous friends and former pupils will be glad to hear that Mr. Landrigan is enjoying good health, takes a keen interest in current events, enjoys long walks about the city and spends some time each day at work in his carpenter shop. The Guardian joins his many friends in wishing Mr. Landrigan many happy returns.

Revisits United Kingdom On Nuffield Scholarship

(Excerpts from letters received from Flying Officer Archie J. Johnston, Georgetown, P. E. I., now travelling in the United Kingdom on a Nuffield agricultural scholarship; continued from a previous issue.)

On our way to Douglas we passed through Blantyre, birthplace of David Livingstone and took some pictures. Douglas is further south than we anticipated, where we are staying, but it is good agricultural land. The Earl of Hume, Secretary of State for Great Britain, maintains a herd of highland cattle just outside the town. We struck the Canada sign up in our window, just in case we might be accused of trespassing and entered the field to take pictures. It is surprising what you can get away with if they think you are a stranger and don't know any better. Luckily for us Canadians are in favour over here as we were ordered out of Sherwood Forest for trespassing with our car. Seeing that we were Canadians and having been given incorrect directions by a local, the warden was most apologetic when we returned on foot. Highland cattle are really most docile, despite their fierce and shaggy appearance. It was difficult to get close to them and as it was raining we may not have gotten very good pictures. We hope to do better when we go north in June.

It was streaming rain when we got into the small town of Douglas, where my Grandmother's people live. Down a narrow chimney on fire and the firemen pouring water down in the teeming rain. Another fire engine came racing to the aid of the first and the villagers stood in doorways or out in the rain watching the spectacle. Tinto Hill had been covered with snow the previous day and was still unfit for climbing. As the rain clouds were sweeping low over it, it didn't look very inviting just then anyway. We shall try to return later as there is a Cairn at the top on which each visitor should place a stone carried up with him.

We took a tour around the then deserted market in Lanark, which is the largest covered auction market in Britain. Apart from the old premises, the new ones alone can tie up three thousand cattle at one time.

Our return trip down the Clyde was one of great beauty and wide interest. This valley is said to be almost as fertile as that of the Nile. It floods annually, sometimes causing much damage, but in the event it is an ill which blows nobody good, because the silt deposited by the waters keeps the area prodigiously fertile. This is where some of the best market gardens are. At the present they are a sight of spectacular beauty as well as interest from a horticultural standpoint. It is not uncommon to see fields strewn away to the river side, with all the plants arranged in geometric pattern and lines as straight as a rule. Every available inch is planted with vegetables and strawberries. One farm of about 150 acres, known as Garrison farm and owned by James Warnock, employs about ninety-five men. Our host knows him personally and will take us to see them. As we were short of time, we could only turn at the gate and see the acres of lettuce and rhubarb between there and the house. There is a story that if a visitor can find a weed on this farm, the owner will give him a shilling for it.

As I said the Athenium, or No. 4 Overseas Service Club has changed and will undergo further change. At present it is occupied by the Glasgow School of Dramatic Art, but we understand that it is now being renovated and eventually will contain an Elizabethan theatre. Mr. Armstrong with his connections at the Royal Academy of Music, arranged for Fred and I to bring Andrew and Mrs. Hamilton and be present at the opening of the opera 'A Night in Venice'. Mrs. Hamilton who is interested in opera, was thrilled at the prospect and we all enjoyed it immensely. Possibly because it was so colourful and so many beautiful participants. Anyway we enjoyed it and want to go back.

Mr. Armstrong came down to see that we were comfortable and sent our mail to us, so that we might read it in the intermissions. His generosity is almost embarrassing as he would accept nothing for the tickets and has invited us and his wife to come to a drama soon. He is making all the arrangements in addition to having seen the opera, he had us up to tea the night before,

Coroner's Jury Charges Criminal Negligence

Roderick Jeremiah Steele of Cardigan was charged yesterday with criminal negligence in the driving of a motor vehicle causing the death of Leo Douglas Sheppard, 13 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Sheppard of Cardigan. The charge arose as the result of an accident which occurred late Thursday night when a 1/2-ton truck driven by Mr. Steele left the road near Cardigan North, turned over, pinning young Sheppard, who was riding on the back of the truck, to the ground. The young boy died while en route to the King's County Hospital.

Hell Offensive And Heaven A Bore, Says Dean

OXFORD, England (Reuters)—The traditional picture of hell is offensive and that of heaven boring, a clergyman told a conference of churchmen here Friday.

Canon J. S. Bezzant, dean of Saint Johns College, Cambridge, declared the hideous pictures of hell must have issued from diseased minds. And much of the traditional imagery descriptive of heaven no longer seemed desirable.

"Hell offends, heaven bores," he told the conference of modern churchmen.

Hell Offensive And Heaven A Bore, Says Dean

"Purgatory and hell have now in effect been banished by the reformers, and we are left with little more than a sentimental notion that all who die are forthwith in paradise or heaven.

"This involves a conception of God so generally tolerant as to be morally indifferent and perverts the immortal hope from a moral and spiritual stimulant into a narcotic."

Canon Bezzant declared it would be better to say nothing of "spiritual geography and topography."

"There is no reason to suppose we know more about life after death than a caterpillar on a leaf known what it is like to fly in the air," he said.

HONG KONG (Reuters)—The Chinese Communist government has appointed Wang Ping Nan, ambassador to Poland, as delegate to its conference with the United States in Geneva on Monday, the Communist New China news agency announced Wednesday.

Alexis Johnson, American ambassador to Czechoslovakia, will represent the United States. He is now in Washington being briefed by state secretary John Foster Dulles.

The simultaneous announcement of the talks last Monday in Peking and Washington said they would cover the repatriation of nationals in each other's country and other "points at issue."

Dulles told his press conference Tuesday the United States would be willing to discuss with Communist China any matter directly affecting the two countries with a view to arriving at a peaceful settlement.

R. C. M. P. Seize Smuggled Goods

MONTREAL (CP)—The RCMP harbor patrol Friday reported seizure of a quantity of smuggled goods and the arrest of two men as the result of operations Thursday night.

Supt. E. Brakes-Moore said a man from Croydon, Que., was found in a railway box car with 25 bottles of smuggled liquor. He was taken to his home where police found 46 more bottles of liquor, 19 bottles of perfume, tweed cloth, a camera and 16 women's girdles.

The second man, who lives in Montreal, was found hiding in a warehouse with 34 bottles of smuggled liquor.

The men allegedly obtained their goods from ship employees and sold, for small amounts to illegal markets.

SOURIS HOSPITAL

Due to the alarming increase in the number of unpaid patient accounts it has become necessary to enforce a strict policy of advance payments. Effective immediately, all maternity cases, not covered by some type of Hospital Insurance, must make a deposit of $35.00 before admission. There can be no exceptions to this rule. Your doctors are being advised accordingly, and the Matron has been instructed to strictly enforce the regulation.
