SALLY DOWS,

An After War Romance of the South.

A swift and utterly new comprehension swept over Courtland. For the first time in his knowledge of her he had suddenly grasped what was perhaps the true conception of her character! Looking at her clearly now he understood the meaning of those pliant graces, so unaffected and yet always controlled by the reasoning of an unbiased intellect; her frank speech and plausible intonations! Before him stood the true-born daughter of a long race of politicians! All that he had heard of their dexterity, tact and expediency rose here incarnate, with the added grace of womanhood. A quick sense of relief—perhaps a dawning of hope—rushed upon him.

"But how will this insure Cato's safety hereafter, or give protection to the others?" he said, fixing his eyes upon her. "The future won't concern you much, co'nnie, if, as you say here, your resignation is sent in, and your successor appointed," she replied, with more gravity than she had previously shown. "But you do not think I will leave you in this uncertainty," he said, passionately. "I forgot," he added, coldly, "you will be well protected. Your—cousin—will give you the counsel of race—and—closer ties."

To his infinite astonishment Miss Sally leaned forward in her chair and buried her laughing face in both her hands. When her dimples became again visible, she said, with an effort: "Don't you think, co'nnie, that as a peace-maker my cousin was even a bigger failure than you're self?" "I don't understand," stammered Courtland.

"Don't you think," she continued, winking her eyes demurely, "that if a young woman, about my size, who had got perfectly tired and sick of all this fuss made about you because you were a no-th'n man managing niggers, if that young woman wanted to show her people what sort of a radical and abolitionist a so-th'n man of their own sort might become, she'd have sent for Jack Dumont as a sample? Eh? Only, I declare to goodness! I never reckoned that he and Higbee would revive that tom-fooling of the vendetta, and take to shootin' each other at once."

"And your sending for your cousin was only a feint to protect me," said Courtland, faintly. "Perhaps he didn't have to be sent for, co'nnie," she said, with a slight touch of coquetry. "Suppose we say I let him come. He'd been hanging round, for he has property here and wanted to get me to take it up with mine in the company. I knew what his new views and ideas were, and I thought I'd better consult Champney, who, being a foreigner, and an older resident than you, was quite neutral. He didn't happen to tell you, co'nnie, anything about it, did he?" she added, with a grave mouth but an indescribable twinkle in her eyes.

Courtland's face darkened. "He did—and he further told me, Miss Dows, that he, himself, was your sister, and that you had refused him because of the objections of your people."

She raised her eyes to his swiftly and dropped them. "And you think I ought to have accepted him?" she said, slowly.

"Not—but—you know—you told me—" he began, hurriedly, but she had already risen, and was shaking out the folds of her dress. "We're not talking business, co'nnie—and business was my only excuse for coming here and taking Sophy's place. I'll send her in to you now."

"But, Miss Dows!—Miss Sally!" She stopped—hesitated—a singular weakness for so self-contained a nature—and then slowly produced from her pocket a second letter—the one that Courtland had directed to the company. "I didn't read this letter, as I just told you, co'nnie, for I reckon I know what's in it, but I thought I'd bring it with me—in case you changed your mind."

He raised himself on his pillow as she turned quickly away; but in that single vanishing glimpse of her bright face—he saw what neither he nor anyone else had ever seen upon the face of Sally Dows—a burning blush! "Miss Sally!" He almost leaped from the bed, but she was gone. There was another rattle at the door—the entrance of Sophy.

"Call her back, Sophy, quick!" he said. "The negress shook her turbaned head 'Not much, honey! When Miss Sally say she goes—she done gone, shuah!"

"But Sophy!" Perhaps something in the significant face of the girl tempted him, perhaps it was only an impulse of his forgotten youth—"Sophy!" appealingly—"tell me!—is Miss Sally engaged to her cousin?"

"Wat dat!" said Sophy, in indignant scorn. "Miss Sally engaged to dat Dumont! Whet fo? You're crazy. No!" "Nor Champney! Tell me, Sophy—has she a lover?" For a moment the whites of Sophy's eyes were uplifted in speechless scorn. "Yo' ask dat! Yo' lyin' dar wid dat snake-bit arm! Yo' lyin' dar and Miss Sally—who has only to whistle to call de fust quality in de state raoun her—coming and going here wid you and trotting on yo'r errands—and yo' ask dat! Yes! she has a lover, and what's his mo', she can't help it; and yo're her lover; and what's mo' yo' can't help it either! An yo' can't back out of it now—bofe of yo'—nebbel! Fo' yo're hers and she's yo're—fo' ebber. For she sucked yo' blood."

what he believed to be the sudden insanity of the negress. "Yes! What's yo' eyes! what's yo' years! who's yo' dat yo' didn't see no beah nuffin! When dey dragged yo' outer de swamp dat night—wid de snake-bite fresh on yo' arm—didn't she, —dat poh chille!—dat same—Miss Sally from hersest down on yo', and put dat baby-moent of hers to de wound and suck out de pizen and save de life ob you at de risk ob her own! Say! And if dey's any troof in Hindoo, don't dat make yo' one blood and one soul! Go way—white man! I'm sick of yo'! Stop dar! Lie down dar! Hol' on, co'nnie, for massy's sake. Well dar—I'll call her back!"

And she did! "Look here—don't you know—it rather took me by surprise," said Champney a few days later, with a hearty grip of the colonel's uninjured hand—"but I don't bear malice, old fellow. Only, by Jove, it was such a sensible, all round, business-like choice for the girl to make—that no wonder I never thought of it before. Hang it all, you see a fellow was always so certain it would be something out of the way and detrimental, don't you know, that would take the fancy of a girl like that—somebody like that cousin of hers, or Higbee, or even me, by Jove, that we never thought of looking beyond our noses—ever thought of the business. And you, all the time so cold and silent an matter of fact about it. But I congratulate you!"

"I CONGRATULATE YOU."

You've got the business down on a safe basis, now, and what's more you've got the one woman who can run it."

They say he was a true prophet. At least the syndicate affairs prospered, and in course of time even the Reeds and the Higbees eventually participated in the benefits. There were no more racial disturbances, only the districts polled peacefully a smaller democratic majority at the next election. There were not wanting those who alleged that Col. Courtland had simply become Mrs. Courtland's superintendent; that she had absorbed him as she had every one who had come under her influence, and that she would not rest until she had made him a senator—to represent Mrs. Courtland—in the councils of the nation. But when I last dined with them in Washington, ten years ago, I found them both very happy and comfortable, and I remember that Mrs. Courtland's remarks upon federal policy and state interests, the education of children and the management of the family, were eminently wise and practical. USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great blood and nerve remedy.

At a meeting in New Westminster, B. C., on Saturday night, a resolution was passed asking the Governor-General to disallow the local Government's bill appropriating $300,000 for a new Government building at Victoria until a just measure of redistribution has been passed.

Open As Day. It is given to every physician, the formula of Scott's Emulsion being no secret; but no successful imitation has ever been offered to the public. Only years of experience and study can produce the best.

MISS RACHEL HUNT, of St. John, was a victim of violent hysteria, sleeplessness, extreme nervousness and general debility, the result of an attack of grippe. She thought her case hopeless, but Hawk's Nerve and Stomach Tonic restored her to health, hope and strength. She strongly recommends it to all who suffer as she did.

A Brockville Druggist's Case.

BROCKVILLE, April 24th.—The popular impression is that doctors and druggists seldom take their own medicine. This is no doubt true, but when a doctor takes ill he generally calls in one of his own profession, in whose skill he has every confidence, or when a druggist is in a similar situation, he often puts his faith in the preparations of some other chemist which he knows give good results. Both the doctors and druggists in such cases show their good sense. A case in point happened in this town a short time ago. Mr. F. M. Turner, the well known and popular druggist, who is now travelling for Parke, Davies & Co., has for a long time been a sufferer from congestion and inflammation of the kidneys. He tried a great many remedies, but without result. His patrons, however, spoke so highly of D. d.'s Kidney Pills that he was induced to try them. He now states that he is completely cured, and to your correspondent he said that as a rule he had very little faith in patent medicines, but that for the cure of kidney troubles, rheumatism, backache, etc., he does not know of any remedy that is giving such good results as D. d.'s Kidney Pills.

In conversation with The Empire correspondent a member of Sir John Abbott's family said: "The ex-Premier since his return from Europe has been suffering from a protracted and severe illness, which for the past 10 days has confined him to his bed. Sir John's physicians have given instructions that he must leave business absolutely alone and have forbidden him to receive correspondence, or any communications calculated in any way to cause him mental or physical exertion."

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great blood and nerve remedy.

REV. HENRY M. SPIRK, rector of Mungah, N. B., advised Mrs. Wm Thompson of that place to try Hawk's Tonic for acute dyspepsia. Read what they both say in another column as to the result.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

EXTREME DEBILITY AFTER THE GRIP.

Mr. Peter Lingley, Councillor, Peterborough, Queens Co., N. B., says:

"Oct. 21, 1892.—Last winter I had a very severe attack of the Grip, which did me very little and reduced in flesh. I had no appetite, and was so nervous I could not sleep. I was under Doctors' treatment for months, but received no benefit. My friends thought I had consumption and I got so low that they were expecting my death at any day. As a last resort they decided to try

HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC, 3 bottles of which Rapidly Restored Me To Health.

I slept well, my appetite was restored and I soon became stronger, healthier and more vigorous than I had been for years. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, as I feel that I owe My Life to its Virtues.

Mr. Isaac G. Stevens, Gate Keep. C. E. R. Depot, St. John, N. B., says: I was with Mr. Lingley during his severe illness and was daily expecting to have to notify his relatives of his death.

The Telephone Company

P. E. ISLAND. PARTIES using the Telephone would do well to talk much more satisfactorily if they would observe the following rules:—

1st. Speak with the mouth about four inches from the transmitter. 2nd. Speak in a moderate tone of voice, not too loud, and distinctly. 3rd. Place the telephone so as to cover the ear, just as if you wished to shut out all other sounds. Do not press too hard on the ear. 4th. It is possible to talk and be heard when standing back two or three feet from the transmitter, if you shout loud enough, but it is not a pleasant mode of conversation, is entirely unnecessary, and is a useless waste of wind and lungs. Besides being very annoying to all within range of your voice.
