MR. AND MRS. ALLISON HARRIS

35th Wedding Anniversary Celebrated At Summerside

Mr. and Mrs. Allison Harris, Summerside, were honored on Saturday evening, July 4 by relatives and friends who gathered at their home to celebrate with them on the occasion of the 35th anniversary of their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris were married in the College Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church in West Somerville, Mass on June 18, 1927 with Rev. George E. Heath performing the ceremony. Mrs. Harris was the former Charlotte Sweet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sweet of Knutsford, P.E.I. Among the guests at the anniversary celebration were two of their attendants, Mr. Guy Harris, who was the bestman and Mr. Ernest Darby who acted as one of the ushers.

Mr. Harris have five children: Lorne, New Glasgow, N.S. Olga, Mrs. Leigh Donald, Sackville, N.B. Vance in Summerside and Garth and Garland, twins. All the children were present at the affair with the exception of Garland, who sent a telegram of congratulations from his home in Seattle, Wash. Mr. and Mrs. Harris have four grandchildren, Gregory and Gaylene Donald and David and Wendy Harris.

A humerous poem written for the occasion was read by Lorne on behalf of the family and an address from their friends was read by Mrs. S.S. Beaton. A presentation of money and gifts was made and flowers were presented by the grandchildren. A beautifully decorated anniversary cake from their daughter Olga was also presented.

The verses of congratulations were read by Mrs. George Ellis and Rev. C.R. Webber gave a congratulory speech.

Mr. Harris on behalf of himself and his wife thanked all present for their thoughtfulness.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Lorne Harris, Mrs. Vance Harris, Mrs. Leigh Donald, and Gregory and Gaylene Donald.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Fire On Hearth Brightens This Damp, Cold July Day

A fire? Yes, we have kindled a fire on our hearth this evening, to cheer us in this strange spell of weather, which in July, has given showers through the recent days, and set an unseasonal coolness over all.

James, husband of this house, surveying sky and field this morning, beclouded and misted by the gray of a shower, declared he "Never before saw the like of it at this time of year. At any rate, not to recall it. Now, if it were June" he said "it usually had some damp cool days. There was always the day or days of the sheeps' storm, a cold, rainy spell that seemed to come just on the heels of the shearing. But not in July! July actually brought the summer with its long, sunny days."

The July-months of memory! Remember them? A warm, sunny breeze, long lovely days an enchanted time, if ever. A time of paths winding invitingly along the fields. Begging one to wander — to come to dells where the wild strawberries grew in the woodlands to love their green aisles, to the brook where, if one's cast was fortunate, silvery — sided trouts could be lifted from out of the shadowy depths.

Oh, the delight of that holiday-time, when the days were children visited, and played together, and finally "walked a piece" with this one or that along some familiar path of the homing. There was delectable fragrance of red clover and the fields were lush and full. And one wished the year would pause for a while instead of hastening by. But July gave one a rainy for her birthstone, and a larkspur for her flower. And lovely memories, before she was up and away.

"If it were only the weeds that are growing" a visiting farmer commented with a worried expression, when with ours he spoke of the hoed crops, today. "But the seedlings will have grown so much that all in all, it will leave the rows hard to hoe."

"But" James said "give us rain every time rather than drought! When the grass commences to wilt, and the earth is parched and the stock restless in the pastures, there's no happiness then, for the farmer."

"They do say 'The longest chant comes to an end' " the younger farmer smiled. "We'll get our fine weather yet to get on with the weeding."

"Meanwhile, the hay is growing" James said.

"And thickening considerably, I would say" the visitor offered. "Yes, this spell of weather will put more feed in the mows."

Today the mistletoemen ran as well as in the early spring.

"See the raindrops dance on the water!" we said to Alex, when we stopped a minute on the lane-bridge at mailtime this morning — When it is clear and dimpled with sunlight, we pause there to watch the minnows at play, and usually if we remain silent, we may glimpse a trout swim in the depths. Sometimes too, we may catch sight of a duck and her ducklings boating farther up the stream, where the alders provide sanctuary. And toward the mill a ripple breaking the surface, tell us of a muskrat adventuring there.

"It's not raining now" James comes in to report of the night. "But, as yet, there's no sign of a star."

A cool damp July day — this was. But gracious to the folks at Alderlea, in that as we write this, it is to say that "All's well."

Until tomorrow — Diary—Good-night.....

Young Couple Are Honored By Community

KENSINGTON — On Saturday evening, June 30 a large number of friends, relatives and neighbors gathered at Darnley Hall to honor the Rev. Theo. Crozier and his bride, the former Sheila Diane Eaton, who were recently married at St. Stephen's United Church at Amherst, N.S.

Theo and Sheila were escorted to a daintily decorated chair beneath a pretty arch, by Mr. and Mrs. Morley Crozier.

Carrying in the baskets filled with gifts, were Anne and Sandra Crozier, nieces of the groom. The ribbons were cut by Mrs. Junior Hickey, while the accompanying names and good wishes were read by Mrs. Elmer Hickey, and the gifts were arranged by Miss Phyllis Crozier.

Both bride and groom graciously acknowledged the gifts and thanked those who arranged the shower, and all joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows".

Lunch was served by the ladies of the district.

ARY HAWORTH

Overseas Job Requires Strength Of Character

Dear Mary Haworth: In counselling a henpecked man whose arrogant wife is his boss in an interior decorating firm, you tried to give him a shot-in-the-arm of courage, to find and be himself.

Among other things you said: if he isn't a world beater in the essentially womanish field of interior decorating, so what? Maybe he belongs by temperament and aptitude in an entirely different line of endeavor — unselfish, adventurous, humanitarian. Doing an outdoor job with the Peace Corps, for example.

I spent 10 years overseas with a foreign aid program. And speaking from long experience, I seriously question the advisability of encouraging persons with problems of major emotional maladjustment to undertake overseas work.

The prospect beckons strongly to many Americans who feel frustrated at home. This ferment is sometimes a good thing and aids recruiting. When the dissatisfaction stems from the person's objection to too much emphasis on materialist values in our society, a transfer to the foreign aid field may be tenable. But many a contribution and develop larger perspective on the American way.

But when the individual's unrest stems from failure in his key relationships, this should be construed as a major disqualification for overseas service. Old problems inherent in yourself don't go away; and overseas one encounters a whole school of new problems guaranteed to try the soul.

Great adaptability is required, together with confidence in one's inner strength. This is less true of certain overseas jobs where foreign contacts are few. But even then, the overseas worker's life, outside the office, is lived in a strange environment.— F.P.

Dear F.P.: Thanks for the precautionary reminder. But if there is one thing this henpecked fellow doesn't need, it is a discouraging word. I was assuming, of course, that competent screening authorities would assess his qualifications for overseas service, in the event he got up enough steam to apply.

It is so easy to say the discouraging word; and not at all easy to fashion the phrase that may energize a demoralized man, to lift him off by his bootstraps out of an impasse.—M.H.

Dear Mary Haworth: A most attractive widow, with wealth and fine family background, is being pursued by a widower of quite different heritage and character. Their families would have absolutely nothing in common.

Immediately on meeting her, he told his friends that he was going to marry her, that she has everything he was looking for—money, lovely home, fine family, prestige.

His best friends say he is the type who would sell his house, bank the money, move in with her and let her pay the bills. They say he is greedy, stingy, avaricious and scheming—posing as someone who loves her.

In the past he has led numerous desirable women to believe he was in love and meant to marry them; he always pursues a selfish course, with no thought of the other person.

The town, looking on, wonders how the widow can be taken in; but he is practised and clever at pretense. She is a lovely person, doesn't deserve to be deluded; yet I wouldn't broach the subject nor would anyone else. What is the answer:

Why aren't women more discerning when a self - seeking, flattering man appears?

A.P.

Dear A.P.: Your tirade has a sour grapes flavor, as if you had hoped to marry the man and missed.

As to why the widow is taken in, maybe she isn't. Maybe her eyes are open to the man's ambition. Likely her forebears were ambitious too, clawing their way up, so she's not a stranger to the type.

Perhaps she feels it's a fair trade, to commit her prestige, et al, to the man, in exchange for his keeping her on a pedestal.— M. H.

MacKay, Mrs. Cranford MacKay, Mrs. Marion Cole, Mrs. Leigh MacEwen and Mrs. Stanley Brown will direct the program.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

The program was in charge of Mrs. George MacKay, Mrs. Ian Henderson, Mrs. Mont MacEwen, Mrs. Oliver Bernard, Mrs. Francis Murray, Mrs. Murray MacKay and Mrs. Dan Morrison.

URGES MEDICARE VOTE

PEMBROKE, Ont (CP) — Mayor Angus Campbell said Wednesday he has sent telegrams to Premier Woodrow Lloyd of Saskatchewan and the province's College of Physicians and Surgeons urging a public vote on the medical care issue. He suggested that "the Saskatchewan government suspend the Medical Insurance Act and hold a plebiscite to determine the will of the people."

S'side Guide Gets Gold Cord

SUMMERSIDE — Lynda Olscamp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Olscamp, Summerside, received the highest award in Girl Guiding, the gold cord, in a ceremony held Monday afternoon at the Knights of Columbus Camp at Rustico.

The presentation was made by Mrs. R.B. Dewar, division commissioner. The gold 'trefoil was pinned on by Mrs. Marley Wylie, Prince County camp advisor.

A delightful and informative talk on the "land of the rising sun" Japan illustrated with pictures was given by Miss Olscamp and supper was served. Following this visitors were shown around the camp site.

Lynda received her award under the direction of Mrs. T. Earle Hickey, captain of the third Summerside company.

CONFIDENTIALLY YOURS

—by Byrne Hope Sanders

TORONTO, July 12th, 1962 — Here's how to have double insurance to keep your finances in shape. First open a Personal Chequing Account at the BANK OF MONTREAL and use it strictly for spending! Then open a Savings Account—strictly for saving. Here's what I do—I deposit enough money each payday in my Personal Chequing Account to cover my regular expenses. What's left over goes into my B of M Savings Account. Believe me, this system works wonders . . . I pay my bills on time and still save for things my heart is set on. You can, too — see the B of M today.

LET'S FACE IT, wash-days are always a bother, particularly in hot and humid weather. But I've found I'm much more willing to face them since I discovered CALGON, the wonder water conditioner. Calgon conditions water so you need less soap . . . it gets clothes softer, more absorbent and really clean. That's because it prevents 'Hangover Dirt' . . . the film of soil, minerals and soap or detergent that sticks to your clothes. With Calgon—the Water Doctor—your wash is never stiff or scratchy . . . it's naturally softer, more absorbent and really clean. P.S.—For washbowl laundry, add a teaspoonful of Calgon to the water, with mild soap, to get dainty things cleaner.
