THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MARCH 29, 1889.

Mr. Welsh on the Rampage.

HANSARD, for March 22, received to-day, contains reports of several little speeches delivered by the junior member for Queen's County.

"I had a friend last year and he was the Minister of Marine then, and I could get a shot at him; but now he is the Minister of Finance and he is out of my reach, but he holds the purse and he will have to open it for I hope my hon. friend, the Minister of Public Works, will come down in the Supplementary Estimates with a sum sufficient to put all those Prince Edward Island works in proper order.

Some hon. members.—Order. Mr. Welsh.—Order, it is quite right to have order. Before I leave this subject I may say that I looked in the Hansard and I found that when we were discussing that old boat the Northern Light, that the First Minister got tired of the Northern Light and he said, "If the hon. gentleman will keep quiet we will make him a present of the Northern Light."

Some hon. members.—Hear, hear. Mr. Welsh.—It is surrounded by water, and it has got some very fine harbors, and more harbors in proportion to its population and extent than almost any other Province of the Dominion.

Such talk as this may relieve the tedium of Parliamentary business; but is not likely to advance the interests of this Province. The Northern Light would be bestowed in the interests of this Province, if the gift of her would only keep Mr. Welsh quiet.

Hon. Mr. McLeod's measure, respecting "time," has not been introduced a moment too soon. We sadly need a common standard for the computation of time. It is awkward to be continually compelled to calculate mentally the difference between the "railway time" and the "local time."

New Post Offices.

The following new post offices will be opened on the 1st April:—Brackley Beach.—W. McCallum, Postmaster. Served tri-weekly from Little York.

Whispering Ghosts.

AN INCIDENT FOUNDED UPON FACT.

BY REV. FRED. E. J. LLOYD.

The incident which I am about to relate happened several years ago, when the writer was organist and choir-master of the parish church of Llan—situated in a remote corner of South Wales. The church itself was very ancient, ivy-clad and charmingly situated on the north bank of a tidal river, whose waters at high tides rose almost to its very walls.

There were no houses near, and a more lonely spot than the immediate neighborhood of Llan—church could hardly be conceived. The church itself was small, low-roofed, square towered and cruciform, and presented both internally and externally a very gloomy appearance; so gloomy indeed, that there were few persons who could pass by it on a dark night without experiencing more or less mental disquiet. So far from being an object of affection for the old church, and (whether by night or day) would not only pass it but enter it, and I often wandered around and about it at nightfall, sometimes like the immortal Harvey, sitting upon a tombstone to meditate.

Some hon. members.—Order. Mr. Welsh.—Order, it is quite right to have order. Before I leave this subject I may say that I looked in the Hansard and I found that when we were discussing that old boat the Northern Light, that the First Minister got tired of the Northern Light and he said, "If the hon. gentleman will keep quiet we will make him a present of the Northern Light."

Blind to Their Own Interests.

The House of Assembly was amused yesterday afternoon by a very broad distinction which was drawn by Mr. Wise. As to two blind men in his district, both of whom required aid, he thought the leader of the Government mistaken in the man, and pointed out that the one who had been receiving public money was "an old man with a grown up family," while the one for whom he desired a grant "is a young man with six children, whose wife has lately had twins."

Literary and Scientific Institute.

Mr. O. RATTEMBURY addressed the Institute last night. His subject was the play of "Julius Caesar." He sketched the various characters of the play, and illustrated them by reading selections from the text. He also showed the motives which led the conspirators on to the assassination of Caesar, and traced their subsequent fortunes up to the final catastrophe, taking occasion, by the way, to point out Shakespeare's wonderful genius for painting human nature as it is.

President Palmer, after complimenting Mr. Rattenbury very highly on his effort, opened the debate.

Dr. Leeming followed, and stated his opinion that the historical plays were creations of Shakespeare's fancy, and do not show the men as they appear in actual history.

Mr. F. W. L. Moore made some remarks on the contrasted characters of Brutus and Cassius, and the nobility of Antony's nature.

Mr. John Newson took up the cudgels warmly in defence of Cleopatra, who had been mentioned slightly in the debate.

Prof. D. J. McLeod spoke shortly, pointing out the great value of the historical plays, and likened Shakespeare's work to the clothing of the dry bones of history with flesh and blood, and the inbreathing of a soul.

Mr. P. McCourt also made a few remarks.

The lecturer shortly summed up the debate. The audience, though appreciative, was small. We would like to see more young men at the debates. The absentees, it is to be hoped, were all at prayer meetings or other important business.

The subject for next Thursday will be made known soon.

Personal.

Mr. C. C. Watt, representative of Messrs. A. Kansas & Son, Mon real, is here in the interests of the firm.

Mr. Henry Chaplin is said to be "the best dressed man" in the British Parliament. He is one of the tallest men in the Commons, where the average of stature is high, and his gaiters are said to "form a bright spot of color below the gaiters."

Robert T. M. Lincoln, of Illinois, has been nominated by President Harrison to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Great Britain and Marat Halstead, editor of the Cincinnati Gazette, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany.
