KIPLING ARRIVES.

Famous Novelist "Not at Home" to Interviewers

Rudyard Kipling arrives at New York a few days ago. He looked pale and weary, apparently none the worse for the stormy trans-atlantic voyage. Mrs. Kipling and her three children accompany him.

A battalion of newspaper men boarded the Majestic down the bay, and charged upon the eminent visitor while he was yet at breakfast. But he continued to give undivided attention to the victuals. As even a healthy man's breakfast must have a finish, however, the time came when Mr Kipling had to declare himself, and he did. There were men about him ready to give to the world in an Kipling verbiage the Kipling views on everything from expansion to Robert's congressional right and the Cornish poisoning case. Mr Kipling surveyed them for a moment through his glasses and disposed of them with a quick, nervous:

"I have nothing to say on anything whatsoever."

Then he retreated, the invading force followed him with a volley of

"But Mr. Kipling—"

"Not a word, not a word!" said the great man, wisely remembering that his words are worth fifteen cents apiece at the very least. He held his hands above his head by way of shields and escaped.

The newspaper men left, singing softly: We've met with many men from over seas, An' some of 'em was shy an' some of 'em was not,

The Frenchman and the German and Chinese,

But Kipling was the hardest of the lot. Some of 'em would talk in English an' the rest

Would talk from early winter to the fall,

But the Moguli-man we found the greatest pest,

For the bloomin' sod'e wouldn't talk at all.

Still, here's to you, Rudyard Kipling, you escape your anger's ban.

You're a cold, concentrated Briton, but a first-class writin' man.

Although you need to thaw a bit, to you we must be fair,

You are the master-writer, though you didn't treat us square.

'Easn't got no paper of his own,

An' so with us'e dosen't sympathize, Yet we can certify the skill 'e's shown

In 'andlin' literary merchandise.

If 'e'd only start 'is Fuzzy-Wuzzy gush, An' cast loose 'is Ang-o-Hindu talkin' gear

An' appy ray with Rudyard on the rush

Would last an' 'ealthy journalist a year.

Then 'ere's to you, Rudyard Kipling, an' ye're welcome to the town,

You are a prince of writing-men although you turn us down,

We gives you your certificate an' if you want it signed,

We'll come an' 'ave a chin with you when you are more inclined.

Kipling and his family had no difficulty with the new tariff ruling which went into effect recently, they being foreign residents. They will remain in New York for two weeks, staying at the Grenoble, and then will go to New England.

That much he made known in an extraordinary outburst of confidence to one of his closest friends on the voyage, but never once revealed what his object is in favoring America with his presence for those four weeks.

DIED FROM HIS INJURIES.—Stoker Lynch, the young Irishman who dashed into the boiling steam in the engine room of the torpedo-destroyer Thraher, to rescue the lives of his mates, has just died from consumption, following the injuries he then received. He was awarded the Albert medal, the highest distinction for bravery. He is to have a military funeral, and it is also proposed to name after him the next destroyer launched.

ELECTION CAUSES TROUBLE.—At Kingston, Jamaica, in an election to the Legislature, a full-blooded negro was elected over a white candidate. The election is causing considerable trouble, and already both white and colored magistrates and members of the Parochial Board have resigned, as a protest against the vote. The color line seems to be in pretty much of a ravel in Jamaica. The calling out of the police will hardly be the best means of unravelling it.

WINTER'S RAVAGES ON VITALLY.

Weaken the Body and Invite Various Diseases.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Make New, Rich Blood, Fresh Strength, and Endurance—They Thus Fortify all Weak Places and Prevent the Entrance of Disease.

During winter the blood becomes thick, sluggish and weak. It cannot afford sufficient nourishment for the various organs; it circulates much more slowly than it does in the summer, and the body becomes weak, and the health is more easily impaired.

The fatty, heat-producing foods we consume during the long winter months tend to produce this condition. They are much more difficult to digest than are the foods we use in summer, and the formation of new rich blood is consequently much slower.

This is why people are so liable to contract disease in winter, and require "blood medicines" in the spring.

By assisting the digestive organs to perform their work promptly, we can hasten the digestion of food, ensure the provision of a full supply of fresh, rich, nourishing blood, and so keep all the organs in perfect health, and the body in perfect strength.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best, most reliable, and most thorough digestive agents known.

They digest the food, without the aid of the stomach. They ensure the formation of a full supply of new, rich and nourishing blood.

Every organ thus receives all the nourishment it requires, and is fully capable of doing thoroughly all the work that falls to its share.

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

Explosion of Dynamite at the Bottom of a Shaft.

(Halifax Herald.)

A frightful accident happened at Montague on Saturday, by which George McLearn, a miner, was terribly lacerated. McLearn is a tributer and was working in a pit on the Golden Grouse property. He had been working alone and at the time he was hurt was unaccompanied. The story of the incident, as he repeated it, shows McLearn to be a man of great pluck and endurance.

Saturday morning he went to work as usual and drilled a hole. In the afternoon he put in a charge of dynamite and attempted to fire it. The explosive did not go off and McLearn attempted to draw it. He worked away at it his dangerous task when suddenly a charge exploded with terrific force. McLearn was thrown back against the wall and sustained terrible injuries. His face and neck was cut in many places and blood flowed freely from the wounds, blinding the injured man.

To be at the bottom of a shaft under such circumstances would be sufficient to make even the bravest quail. But McLearn is made of good stuff and started to crawl up the ladder. Almost fainting with pain and loss of blood, he managed to reach the open air. This revived somewhat and he proceeded to reach home. Walking was out of the question. In his helpless state McLearn had recourse to the alternative and commenced to crawl. Slowly, inch by inch, he made his way towards his house. Every moment caused excruciating agony and the blood flowed faster. The awful journey was at length accomplished and medical assistance summoned.

Dr. M. A. Smith at once drove out and on examination found McLearn in bad condition. He wears a heavy beard which was covered with blood, and made the wounds look even worse than they were. McLearn had received most of the charge of the rock in the face and neck. Great strips of skin and flesh hung down in strings from many wounds. The neck was lacerated in such a horrible manner that the wind pipe was almost exposed and pieces of rock projected from the cuts. McLearn was nearly blinded, but will recover his sight. One finger was gone from the right hand, but that was the only damage besides the injury to the neck and face. The injured man is a man of good constitution and will recover.

A Generous Offer.

We are authorized to offer our readers, prepaid, a free sample of a never-failing cure for catarrh, bronchitis, irritable throat, influenza, and such throat and nasal diseases. There is no mystery about Catarrhazone, though its effects is magical. Ointments and washes cannot reach the diseased parts, and have thus proved useless. A vigorous denial is given of the recent report that Russia has made a secret bargain with the Ameer of Afghanistan for extending Russian railway communication to Herat. The story appears to have originated in the recent opening of the line to the Kushk, a point two or three hundred miles off. The arrival of the first locomotive scared the natives so badly that the Ameer caused a proclamation to be made that the Russians had no other object than the improvement of the country. It is reported also that the proclamation declared that Afghanistan could depend upon her allies in the event of any aggressive movement on the part of Russia. The real truth appears to be that the new Russian line is a strategic counterpart of a railroad which the English have just constructed on their side of the Afghan frontier. It is now said in India that the Russians are accumulating at Kushk all the materials necessary for the construction of a light railroad to Herat, in the case of an emergency, while in St. Petersburg the English are accused of doing exactly the same thing. Evidently both sides are preparing for a forward dash when the time comes.

To be entirely relieved of the pains and aches of rheumatism means a great deal, and Hood's Sarsaparilla does it.

Caught.

A clergyman recently, addressing those who criticize others while they themselves are open to criticism, told this story: "When I was a boy, we had a schoolmaster who had odd ways of catching idle boys. Says he one day: 'Boys, I must have closer attention to books. The first one of you that sees another boy idle I want you to inform me and I will attend to the case.' 'Ah,' thought I to myself, 'there's Joe Simmons, that I don't like. I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book I'll tell on him.'

"It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master. 'Indeed,' said he. 'How did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' was the reply. 'You did. And were your eyes on your book when you saw him?' I was caught, but I didn't watch for the boys again."—New York Tribune.

A Nautical Explanation.

In front of the Theater Royal at Oxford, England, are, or were, some gigantic stone figures, the age and object of which are buried in oblivion. Two sailors were going by and one of them asked, "Who are these fellows, Bill?"

"The 12 apostles," was the reply without a smile.

"Twelve apostles!" roared the incredulous Jack. "How can that be? There's only six of 'em."

"Well, y' swab," replied the learned Bill, "yer wouldn't have 'em all on deck at once, would ye?"—Leeds Mercury.
