Hogg-Smith Wedding

—Freetown United Church was the scene of a lovely summer wedding, June 21, 1950, at 7 o'clock when Erma Lois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Smith became the bride of Denton Lea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hogg, Central Bedeque, P. E. I. Rev. R. L. Wagner officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with juniper, potted plants and summer flowers by Mrs. Austin Scales and Mrs. Ralph Burns. Bows of white ribbon marked the guest pews.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was attired in a floor length dress of traditional white satin, long sleeves, sweetheart neckline. Its full skirt was gathered to a fitted bodice with beaded trim. Her only ornament was a double strand pearl necklace, gift of the groom. Her floor-length veil of net was gathered to an orange blossom coronet. She carried a shower bouquet of dark red Peers roses.

Her maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Smith was attired in blue organdy over matching blue satin with headdress of white carnations. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Phyllis Reeves wore pink organdy over matching white satin with headdress of white carnations. She carried a bouquet of similar flowers.

Mr. Willard Hogg was groomsmen. The bride entered the church to the strains of the Bridal Chorus, played by the church organist, Mrs. Frank Deacon.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Lyman Smith sister-in-law of the bride sang "I'll Walk Beside You". The ushers were Mr. Elmer Smith and Mr. Ralph Hogg.

The bride's mother was attired in navy-flowered silk with matching accessories and corsage of red roses, the groom's mother in grey with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses. The flower-girl was little Miss Nora Scales, who looked very sweet in white satin and carried a basket of red roses.

Byron Burns dressed in white trousers and navy blazer was very winsome as ringbearer.

This being the first wedding in the Freetown United Church the bride was presented with a white Bible.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the Pacific Inn, Summerside. The bride's table was covered with an Irish linen tablecloth and decorated with summer flowers, centered with the bride's three tier wedding cake and the groom's cake. Those assisting in serving were Miss Katherine Allen and Mrs. Walter Campbell, friends of the bride. Mr. Hazen Hogg, brother of the groom had charge of the guest book.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogg left later on their wedding trip by car to the States. For travelling the bride wore a grey gabardine suit with white accessories and corsage of red roses.

On their return they will reside in Hamilton where the groom is a prosperous young farmer.

Korea; 'Hermit Kingdom' Ends Its Obscurity

AMERICA'S MacARTHUR and Korea's RHEE: The U. S. Commander in the Far East expected Russia to prod for soft spots.

By RICHARD KLEINER NEA Staff Correspondent

KOREA isn't a hermit any more. The site of the world's newest war was long known as the "Hermit Kingdom", but today its era of obscurity is at an end.

In many ways, Korea is one of the toughest spots on the globe for a modern war. It's a rough, mountainous country. It has vast tracts of craggy wilderness, just right for guerrilla activity. And, being a peninsula, it has a long, hard-to-defend coastline.

But it has a climate much like sections of the United States. In the summers, the mean temperature is a comfortable 75. The winters aren't much different from those along the Atlantic coast of the U. S. with a mean temperature of 33.

There is a very rainy season — late spring and summer — when about 22 inches of rain fall. But even so, the annual rainfall of Korea is just about what Midwesterners consider normal.

Korea isn't a big country as countries in Asia go. It's just a bit larger than the state of Minnesota. Cramped into that space are almost twice as many people as live in the state of New York.

Most of them are farmers, like their neighbors across the Yellow Sea in China. And, again like the Chinese, their main foods are rice and fish. Until a few years ago, Korean boats ranged far into the Pacific on lengthy whale-hunting trips. Nowadays, however, the fishermen are content with smaller catches, mainly food fish.

The mountains of Korea, incidentally, have long been looked on as a potentially tremendous source of minerals. Coal is needed but much development is needed before the industry can reach its peak. Other minerals known to exist in the Korean mountains are iron, copper, gold, silver and lead.

Another product that is found in the back country of Korea is wild animals. Tigers abound, and leopards are so numerous that they occasionally find their way into Seoul, South Korea's leading city and its capital until the Communist invasion.

Seoul is a big city, even as American standards go. Its population of more than 936,000 puts it above Cleveland, O., which is the sixth largest city in the U. S. But Seoul, and the rest of Korea, can't compare to the United States when it comes to standard of living. Such things as telephones and radios are still luxuries in Korea. And education, while improving, is not universal. Only 25 per cent of the children of school age were enrolled, at the last count.

The Korean race is small physically. The average man is only 5 feet, 4 1/2 inches tall. But they are strong, a fact emphasized by a Korean who won the grueling Boston Marathon this year. Women in Korea still occupy a very inferior position. Most girls marry when they are 16, and are expected to have large families.

Many Korean homes are small factories, for home industry is thriving. They make bamboo blinds, hats and mats; pottery; grass-cloth; and brass bowls. Silk-worm raising is another profitable small industry.

Korea's contribution to world-wide history, up until events of recent days, has been little. But one thing the average Korean looks on with pride is the "torpedo boats." This unique craft, shaped like a turtle, was the world's first ironclad vessel, built in the 16th Century, and it once helped Korea repel a Japanese invasion force.
