

Separate Verdicts Handed Down

The jury returned with two separate verdicts in Supreme Court last evening, in the case of Donna Louise Wilson, Crapaud, versus Cnst. Alan Burchill of the Borden detachment of the RCMP, the verdict was for the defendant in the case of Donna Louise Wilson versus Cnst. Johannes Plomp, Borden Town Policeman, the verdict was for the plaintiff with damages of $350 to be awarded.

The charge in each case was assault and each defendant was being sued for $1000.

The cases were tried jointly before Mr. Justice R.R. Bell. Counsel for the plaintiff were John Nicholson and Gordon Tweedy. G. Bruce MacDonald was counsel for Cnst. Burchill and Cnst. Plomp.

In his argument Mr. MacDonald said that under the Highway Traffic Act a policeman has the power of arresting anyone, anywhere without a warrant. He also said that a policeman has the right to ask anyone to assist him in the performance of his duty and to use any amount of reasonable force. He said that Mr. Plomp could not be expected to be in Borden 24 hours a day everyday.

Mr. Nicholson replied saying that the fact that the police have such wide powers gives all the more reason to exercise the power carefully.

Witnesses for the plaintiff were: Dr. MacLeod, Bonshaw, Lea Wilson, Crapaud, husband of plaintiff; Owen Eric MacEwen, Crapaud; Jackie Thomas, Crapaud, and the plaintiff herself. Cnst. Burchill and Cnst. Plomp testified in their own defense.

Members of the jury were: Harvey MacPherson, foreman; Borden Ford, Robert Barwise, Lea Chowen, Malcolm Bell, Maurice Bradley and Austin P. Bulger. Judge Bell said that there had been very few such cases in this province.

Mr. MacDonald expressed the possibility of appealing the Plomp case.

Both Flags Are Flown

OTTAWA — Lovers of the Union Jack in Canada will be watching public buildings throughout the country on Monday, May 23, to see how many Royal Union flags are being flown on the anniversary of Victoria Day.

Recently, Queen's MP Heath Macquarrie, asked the government in how many centres and over what buildings was the union jack flown by the direction of any department or official of the dominion government on May 24, 1965.

He was told that in 10 centres where there were at least two flag poles, both the Royal Union Flag (the union jack) and the National Flag of Canada (the Maple leaf flag) were flown over a variety of government buildings. In addition the two flags were also flown at 49 Canadian Force Headquarters buildings throughout Canada.

The Queen's MP was also informed that both flags are flown on the two ground staffs on parliament hill on the official celebration of the Queen's birthday, or on about May 24, and on the anniversary of the Statute of Westminster on December 11 and on the occasions of royal visits and certain Commonwealth gatherings in Ottawa.

The Union Jack will continue to be flown on a courtesy staff on parliament hill when the prime minister of Britain or his representative pays an official visit to Ottawa.

The United Nations flag and the NATO flag and the flags of other countries are also flown on the courtesy staff on special occasions such as state visits by the heads of those countries. The UN flag is flown on United Nations Day and the NATO flag on NATO day while either flag may be flown by special arrangement on other occasions.

Labor Representative Claims Work Tied Up

The men have decided they won't go back to work until they get a "fair increase in wages," Rejean Charlebois, International Representative of the Laborers' International Union of North America, said Thursday morning at a wage protest meeting staged at the Labor Council Hall.

"We've got all construction tied up," said Mr. Charlebois, who expressed the possibility of having to return to the Basilica Recreation Centre to hold future meetings, as the Labor Hall "just won't hold all the interested men."

The first step towards an increase in wages, he said, "would be the recognition of the 'striking' laborers as a bargaining unit by their employers."

He said once the employers recognize the unit and sign a paper to that effect the men will return to work and negotiations will begin as to what wage increases are to be made for various trades.

A basic document is now being drafted.

He said that the bargaining for increases could well take two weeks.

During these two weeks the men would be working but would hold periodic meetings in order to keep up with the progress being made, he said.

MADE HISTORY

The men made history Wednesday when they held the first protest meeting ever to take place on Prince Edward Island, at the Basilica Recreation Centre. There were between 250 and 300 laborers or construction workers present.

Great concern was being expressed over the tax increase in the City of Charlottetown and of the importance city officials seemed to place in keeping up with other Maritime centres as far as taxes go but neglecting

Town Council Are Preparing

SUMMERSIDE — A town spokesman reported Wednesday morning that council committees are preparing their annual departmental budget in anticipation of preparing the 1966 tax rate within a short time.

Mayor George Key Jr. said Wednesday that it was difficult to say at the present time, but there is no tax increase anticipated.

It is expected that the budget meeting will be held on Monday April 18.

to increase the wages along with the tax increase.

The men consider it their duty to fight for higher wages, saying they owe it to their families.

One of the construction workers said yesterday that the finest workers in North America came from P.E.I. and that they had gained a wonderful reputation for their work throughout Canada and the United States.

A number of men expressed concern yesterday over the fact that they might lose their jobs by failing to appear regularly. They felt their employers would take men off the streets to fill the jobs they had left to attend the meetings.

All or most of this concern seemed to have disappeared this morning and despite the fact that nobody brought a key and men had to stand outside the Hall for half an hour in the cold of the early morning, no spirits appeared to be chilled by the fact.

HAS CONFIDENCE

Mr. Charlebois was as full of confidence as ever and said he felt sure employers would be willing to bargain soon. "There will also have to be a majority of employers ready to bargain before any men go back to work. If two employers out of five agree to bargain for increases, this just won't do, their men can't go back to work because it would upset the balance of the protest principle."

"The employers have got to come, all of them, it's got to be increases for everybody," Mr. Charlebois explained to the men. Meetings will continue and more plans will be made until agreements have been reached.

SITES QUIET

Construction sites throughout the city were ominously quiet yesterday with only a handful of workers around the vitally important new high school. Other places, including many private homes under construction, were completely silent.

While some contractors were not immediately available for comment it is believed they are being hit hard by the work stoppage.

However, Douglas Bros and Jones are little affected by the move of the workmen. Howard Douglas said yesterday his firm noted only a few 'helpers' were not on the job and his firm's contract at the high school was proceeding normally. He stated ordinary conditions at the big plumbing contractors firm he heads called for plumbers receiving their regular salary all year round whether there was work for them or not. "In 20 years we have not laid off any because of lack of work," he noted.

Meanwhile, following their protest meeting Thursday morning workers staged a long motorcade through city streets with a police cruiser leading the way for the 'hearse' and other cars with lights blazing in funeral fashion.

ISSUES STATEMENT

Heber Jones, president of the P.E.I. Builders Exchange issued the following statement Thursday morning in connection with the construction workers' walkout now affecting some projects in the city:

The P.E.I. Builders Exchange have contacted their members with respect to the walkout of some workers on the job and have been advised that some of the members received a circularized letter from Rejean Charlebois of Montreal requesting a meeting with all the contractors at a mass meeting.

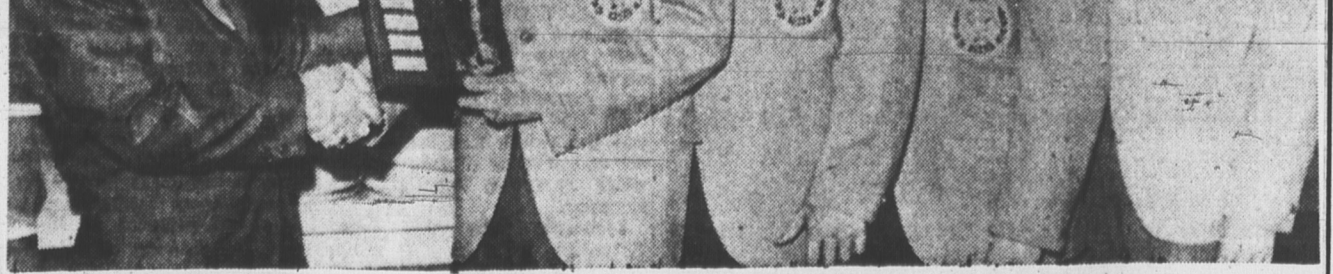

The Builders Exchange states the union that Mr. Charlebois represents has no bargaining status whatsoever within the Province of P.E.I. and they are willing to negotiate with the union if it becomes properly certified in accordance with the Industrial Relations Act.

In the meantime, the local contractors have not been contacted by their employees with respect to any grievances but are willing to discuss any such grievances with their employees, but not with Mr. Charlebois through his improper and unusual measures of trying to bring the contractors and workers together.

In spite of the walkout the contractors report that the work on all jobs is continuing.
