THE DAILY EXAMINER.

OCTOBER 24, 1881.

Editorial Jottings.

LONDON must be quite a naughty place if the following statistics be true. It appears from the police reports that the Great City has 30,000 regular thieves;

150,000 habitual gin drinkers; and 150,000 persons living in systematic debauchery and vice. Out of its large population London has not more than 200,000 regular attendants at any place of worship. What a splendid chance for some of our Canadian Missionaries?

—Advertising pays. A single company in Hull, G. B., posted circulars weighing 20 tons. These circulars were distributed by the Post Office without any confusion or delay in forty-eight hours. The despatch necessitated the employment of seven extra railway cars. The cost for postage alone was $11,700.

—Titles of honor have great power in the eyes of the people. A man of note is known nowadays by the alphabetical adjunct to his name. In the eyes of the knowing ones, the love of Stars and Garters appears somewhat foppish.

Macaulay could write of Hampden,

"Whose plain addition of Mr. has, to our ears, a more majestic sound than the proudest of Feudal Titles." A proud list certainly is that which includes the plain Mr. of Mr. Pym, Mr. Addison, Mr.

Burke, Mr. Fox, Mr. Sheridan, Mr.

Canning, and Mr. Gladstone. As an instance of how these titles are regarded by the knowing ones, the following story is told of William IV. which has the merit of being authentic. On succeeding to the throne, the sailor King, was much gratified to find how many old naval officers remembered His Majesty and trusted His Majesty had not forgotten them. The King frankly avowed at a dinner party, that one officer was always pestering him. "However," His Majesty continues, "I got rid of him at last; I made him a Knight." "And served him right too" exclaimed one of the guests.

Even the presence of the Sovereign could not prevent the outburst of laughter that followed. The satirist Swift, described the thing both wittily and succinctly,
