Many Visitors At Lennox Is. Indians Mark St. Ann's Day

Several hundred persons arrived before 11 a.m. to attend an outdoor observance of Solemn High Mass featuring an Indian choir. The crowds continued to increase steadily until late afternoon.

A great many families carried their own lunches, but the canteens were busy at all times, and a chicken barbecue pit provided some 600 dinners for visitors.

A light sea breeze combined with warm sunny skies to provide ideal weather for the day, and persons were observed from points in all parts of Prince Edward Island, and from several in Central Canada and the U.S.A.

Perhaps the visitor who represented the greatest distance, also recalled to memory the origin of the term "Indian", as applied to the early North American natives. He was a biology scientist a native of India, on a visit to Canada to study marine biology in this country.

A feature attraction at the St. Ann's Sunday observance on Lennox Island was the presence of Joe Abram, a native of the res-
