J. B. O'Reilly's Poetry.

Below are some striking verses by the late John Boyle O'Reilly:—

Life is a certainty,
Death is a doubt;
Men may be dead
While they are walking about.
Love is as needful
To being as breath;
Loving is dreaming—
And waking is death.

Here is a humorous quatrain:—

'You gave me the key of your heart, my love;
Then why do you make me knock?'
'Oh, that was yesterday, saints above!
And last night I changed the lock!'

What a contrast is this martial stanza:—

'Soldiers, why do you shrink from the hiss of the angry lead?
The bullet that whizzed is past; the approaching ball is dumb.
Stand straight! You cannot shrink from Fate; let it come!
A comrade in front may hear it whiz—when you are dead!'

What a moral is taught in the little poem entitled 'Remorse':—

I remember when I was a boy
That a grown up girl wanted to kiss me;
And I struggled, and was angry and shy,
And ran off when she tried to caress me.
And I've thought of that day through the years;
What a moral, my friend, lies in this;
Under every sweet leaf that appears
Lurks a pain for the loss of that kiss.

Of the many melodies evoked by the sorrows of Ireland this stanza is an apt example:—

O motherland, there is no cause to doubt thee;
Thy mark is left on every shore to-day,
Though grief and wrong may cling like robes about thee,
Thy motherhood will keep the queen always.
In faith and patience working, and believing
Not power alone can make a noble state;
Whate'er the land though all things else conceiving,
Unless it breed great men it is not great.

A Trip to British Columbia.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Farm Calgary the appearance of the country rapidly changes. We are now in the ranching country. It is here the great supply for building purposes for thousands of miles east and west are procured. Large quantities of logs, brought down from the Bow River country are there manufactured into all kinds of lumber. Extensive ranches are passed in rapid succession. Great herds of horses in the valleys, thousands of cattle on the terraces, and millions of sheep on the hill tops, can be seen at once, presenting a picture novel and interesting in the highest degree. Here are coal mines in the valleys. Now we cross the Bow River and ascend to the top of the first terrace where a magnificent view is had looking toward the left, where the foot hills rise in succession to the snow capped range behind them. Here again the valley widens, and is now broken by ravines. Through the openings in those ravines you can see far away the tips of the snowy peaks of the Rocky Mountains. When we are nearing Kananaskis the mountains suddenly appear near at hand, apparently an impenetrable mountain mass, their bases of a dark hue, their sides white and varied in color, their peaks white with snow,—presenting an enchanting view in the rays of the morning sun. The Kananaskis River is here crossed by a a high iron bridge, and the roar of the great falls of the Bow River can be heard. The mountains now rise abruptly in great masses, capped with snow and ice, and just beyond Kananaskis Station the train makes a bolt into the mountains, and you find yourself hemmed in between two mountains of nearly vertical walls of dizzy height. This is the gap by which the C. P. R. enters the Rocky Mountains, and through which the Bow River finds an outlet. Now we are in the Rockies, and the scenery is immensely grand. Mountains on all sides majestic and castellated in appearance. The interest in the grand and majestic surroundings increases as you are rapidly whirled along, speeding through gorge and over mountain, changing the views with the suddeness of a kaleidscope. There is nothing so deceptive to an Eastern eye as distance. Mountain ranges that you would think are but a gun-shot distant are dozens of miles away. There is a story told in the mountains illustrative of the difficulty that an Eastern man has in guaging distances here. "Three Eastern men were travelling in the mountains, when one of the party got a little in advance of his comrades. He came to a little rivulet of two or three feet's breadth, and began stripping. His comrades coming up, asked him what he meant by putting off his clothes there. He said he was going to swim this stream. "You foolish fellow," said they, "this is not a river. Why, you can step over it." "No," said he, "I have been deceived so often that I will not trust you, but shall swim over this stream."

Banff Station is the first stopping place in the mountain, and I would advise every person who travels over the C. P. R. through the mountains to stay over here a day. He can get a better view of the grandeur of these stupendous mountains by going to some one of the hotels here and staying a short time than in any other way. Here the C. P. R. have built a magnificent hotel with all the latest appliances for comfort and accommodation that must please the most fastidious tourist or pleasure seeker. There are also several others here where the tourist or pleasure seeker can have all the comforts and attention given him that he can desire, and at very moderate terms. I would advise all who may take a trip over the Rockies to take the Grand View Hotel buss, which will give you a free drive half way up the mountain where you will meet Mr. Wright, the proprietor, who will receive you with a hearty good welcome, and who is ready to give you all the information you may desire with regard to height and distances of any of the surrounding mountains. You have here an excellent view of the falls of the Bow River. Here the Hot Sulphur Spring takes its rise in the side of Sulphur Mountain at an altitude of 5,200 feet. There are at this hotel a number of invalids who are here for a few weeks having baths. Many of whom have regained their wonted health and are returning to their homes satisfied that they have been cured of their ailments.

In my next I will give you a letter of the scenery and grandeur of the Selkirk and Cascade Ranges. D.

News Notes.

The Turkish soldiers at Jerusalem have expelled the Franciscan Fathers from the city.

The aldermen of New York claim that the recent census enumeration fell short about 200,000, and will ask for recount.

Among the articles for sale by auction at Ottawa belonging to General Middleton were the cocked hat and plumes worn on so many fields in Canada.

The largest sailing vessel afloat has just been launched at Glasgow. She is a five-masted ship of 3,750 tons burden, and is intended for the nitrate trade.

The United States cotton crop is estimated at 7,311,322 bales, 373,032 bales more than that of last year, and 265,489 bales more than the largest crop ever grown.

Aaron Buckler, who came from Bowmanville to Montreal the other day blew out the gas, went to bed in the Albion Hotel, and was found suffocated in bed the next morning.

The largest cargo of coal ever loaded at any Cape Breton port was that taken Aug. 23rd by the steamship Serica from the Sydney and Louisburg Co's. pier, consisting of 4,094 tons.

It is reported that Miss Smith, of East Wood, a most important witness in the Benwell murder case, has mysteriously disappeared. Col. Benwell, the father of the murdered man, was to have sailed from England a few days ago to give evidence in the case, but a cable announces that he is dying and probably will never hear the verdict.

The North Sydney Herald says: Up to the 31st of August this year the number of arrivals amounted to 1,064 vessels, registering 418,175 tons, against 744 vessels, registering 314,617 tons, for the corresponding period last year—an increase of 302 vessels, and a tonnage increase of 107,829 tons. Thousands of tons of coal leave our harbor every day, the shipments being curtailed only by the capacity of the mines for supplying the demand.

In England, during the month of June, there were 79 strikes, which increased to 99 during July. These took place in all kinds of trade, so that the labor market there is in a very unsettled condition. The number of unemployed skilled laborers has also increased. It is not often that agricultural laborers can combine to strike, but this happened recently at Boughton, near Northampton, where a large number of them stopped work for more pay.

Last week there were in Vancouver harbor sailing vessels with a tonnage of 10,791 tons, and steamships with 9,481 tonnage. The World says: "With the steadily increasing lumbering trade centred on Burrard Inlet, and the growing trade, both local and transcontinental, done through this city, Vancouver will soon stand without a rival on the Pacific coast north of San Francisco. Among the foregoing are not included the numerous tugs and general freight vessels, of which this is the centre, and which bring the trade of many logging camps and settlements along the coast to this city."

A house of five stories (leaning against a ground) has just been excavated in Pompeii in which important frescoes are still in a good state of preservation. In the principal room is a representation of Bellerophon—a youth holding the winged Pegasus with one hand, while with the other he receives the orders from Proetus, who is seated on a richly decorated throne. The lower part of the house is divided into bath rooms. The paintings in the frigidarium are specially preserved—a nymph riding on a sea-horse, and a frieze with comic scenes of pigmies fighting birds and crocodiles in Egypt.
