

LOOKS OVER LOBSTERS

Pick me please! The voice of the lobster seemed to be saying in Walter Massey, director at the Kings Theatre Georgetown who took time during a rehearsal break to look over some of the live lobsters which were to be cooked for the annual St. James Parish lobster supper held Wednesday. The supper was attended by Mr. Massey and members of the theatre cast. He is directing the play being presented this summer at the Kings Theatre, they are

"Under the Yum Yum Tree" and "The Marriage Go Round", which will run from July 1st. to September. Seen with Mr. Massey are two members of the theatre staff, Florence Richards of Alberty Plains and Patrick Donahue of Montague

Circus Comes To Ch'town

The Sells and Gray Three Ring Wild Animal Circus puts on a one-day show on Belvedere Avenue in Charlottetown on Monday July 4 under the sponsorship of the Charlottetown Volunteer Fire Department. Circus spokesmen indicate that this year's edition of Sells and Gray has drawn together top talent from the various European and American circuses and combined it into the strongest production in the show's 66-year history. Special emphasis has been placed on daring aerial and trapeze numbers and on animal acts.

Headlining this year's bill is young Captain Johnny Golden, wild animal trainer and former Hollywood stunt man. Armed with gun, whip and chair, he enters the steel arena at every performance to battle five jungle-bred African lions. His steel-nerved mastery of the snarling cats keeps tension-filled audiences on the edge of their seats. Each of his savage pets weighs over 500 pounds and can break the back of a horse with a single sweep of a paw.

Another outstanding feature of Sells and Gray Circus for 1966 is the petite blond, Miss Gerda, from Austria, who slides down a wire from the peak of the big top to the ground suspended only by her teeth. There, there is the lovely Patricia Miller, ballerina, on horseback, who performs intricate dance steps and graceful acrobatics with breath taking grace on the back of a galloping horse. The Hills, featured last season with Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey present their lovable group of trained French poodles in an act reported to be as amazing as it is appealing. Trained elephants and boxer jugglers, wire-walkers and other popular circus acts will be included, plus of course, the traditional circus headed by Bill Nippo with his timely take-off on "Batman" and the "Ratcar".

Performances are scheduled for 2 and 8 p.m. Activities on the circus grounds will commence an hour prior to show times. Tickets may be purchased in advance from the members of the Volunteer Fire Department.

OTTAWA (CP) — Steel production, an important industrial growth indicator, is increasing again after last month's minor dip.

Figures for the first three weeks of June indicate steel ingot production rose almost two per cent and last week was running well ahead of twice the base production period, 1957-59.

Earlier figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed strong gains over last year. Ingot production this February was up more than nine per cent over output in February, 1965.

But May showed a small drop to 877,632 tons from the previous May's record output of 880,115.

Production in the first five months of this year amounted

New French Defence Chief Considers Job Challenge

By RUSS FEJEN
MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's first French-speaking defence chief, Lt. Gen. Jean-Victor Allard, 53, sees his new job as essentially a challenge to make the armed forces happy and to make them understand the necessity for transformation.

"That's not an other goal," he told a press conference here following an announcement of his appointment as chief of the defence staff, succeeding Air Chief Marshal Frank R. Miller.

"He said the job of informing the armed forces about the need for integration is an important one, because the morale of the armed forces is a delicate thing."

"We're not only integrating who can't practice it and can't use it."

"Generally speaking, before we had a chance to go and talk to the troops and tell them what the new form was, morale was a bit low."

Asked about the possibility of a financial incentive to promote bilingualism, Gen. Allard said the idea is good and "could certainly help."

Would he press for such an incentive for the armed forces if it took effect for federal civil servants?

"I certainly will. I have already."

Asked about the use of French and English in the armed forces, Gen. Allard said "bilingualism is coming naturally."

"Of course, bilingualism now is limited mostly to French-speaking Canadians speaking English. The opposite did not occur because the necessity did not exist."

The founding of Quebec's Royal 22nd Regiment in 1914 marked the beginning of bilingualism in the Canadian Army, but it took a long time to establish a tradition.

"I think French Canada must take its place, must take its responsibilities because they are to 2,544,734 tons, a gain of more than five per cent."

DBS reported Tuesday that steel production for the third time this month has shown an increase over production in the comparable weeks of 1965.

The bureau's index of production, based on average weekly output 1957-59 equalling 100, was 210 last week, 206 the previous week, and 210 in the week ended June 4.

Wages, Unemployment Seen Posing Threat To Economy

MONTREAL (CP) — Leon Keyserling, president of the U.S. conference on economic progress, said here North America will suffer a substantial recession in the next few years unless a new approach is found to problems of wages and unemployment.

Mr. Keyserling told 1,100 delegates attending the Textile Workers' Union of America (C.I.O.) biennial convention here that the great problem in the U.S. and Canada is to bring the purchasing power of the population to a level with production.

"Our present government economic policies are not socially fair to large sections of the population and will increase, not reduce, poverty in the future unless remedial action is taken," he said.

Improving social security benefits, providing jobs for the unemployed and raising minimum wages were some ways of solving the economic crisis.

The U.S. government's wage guideposts, which set a ceiling of 3.2 per cent on annual wage increases, violate the average man's sense of decency and fairness, he said.

The big problem in the U.S. was not that wages were rising too fast but that they were not rising fast enough.

There is not enough buying power in North America to use up the goods produced by industry.

WANTS PRICES CURBED
The way to halt inflation is by setting a limit on rising prices and on profits, not by setting a ceiling on wages, he added.

The government administers wage guideposts took care to see that wages never rose more than 3.2 per cent but they never budged with industries where wages were too low and did not rise enough.

Mr. Keyserling said the minimum wage in the U.S. should be raised to $2.00 an hour from $1.25.

Costs and wages right now are out of balance in North America with the building of plants proceeding twice as fast as the ability to consume, he said.

Only by allowing wages to rise in each industry to a level commensurate with profits could the profits be spread equitably over the community instead of being concentrated in a few hands.

Mr. Keyserling said he estimates total wages in the U.S. are now $50,000,000,000 less than they ought to be for the health of the economy.

Following Mr. Keyserling's speech the delegates resolved that the presidential wage guideposts should be abolished and a wage policy adopted that would "permit textile workers to emerge from the second-class citizenship to which they have been assigned by decades of exploitation."
