

Eisenhower Wants Farmer To Share In Prosperity

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — President Eisenhower called Tuesday night for a "full share" for the farmer in prosperity.

He aimed a scathing indictment of "mockery and deceit" at Democratic proposals to revive rigid price supports.

Eisenhower described the farm program subscribed to by rival Adlai E. Stevenson as a "political grab bag," "crooked," "price-depressing," and "politicizing at the farmers' expense."

In contrast, he said in a national television and radio broadcast, his administration is opening up for farmers "brighter peacetime prospects than they have had for years."

Ahead, he promised, lies "full income parity." He defined it as the farmers' "full share in our country's good times."

FREE AGRICULTURE

"In a free agriculture, farmers attain that kind of parity in the market place," Eisenhower declared. "That's what I spoke for at Kasson (Minn., four years ago): the attainment of that full share for the farmer—the preservation of a free agriculture."

Democrats have charged Eisenhower endorsed 100-per-cent parity price supports at Kasson in the 1952 campaign.

Parity is a price set by law to offer farmers a fair return for their products in terms of things they buy. Stevenson has endorsed a return to 90-per-cent parity supports for major field crops. Eisenhower, who won congressional approval of flexible supports made this one of his principal targets in a slashing attack on the Democratic position.

"Rigidly fixing price supports at 90 per cent of parity without regard to supply conditions—and so encouraging surpluses that depress market prices—is for the farmer mockery and deceit," he declared.

"That kind of program compels drastic quotas, allotments, government regulation. It robs the farmer of a chance for full income parity. It is a program for politicians, not farmers."

The president said that, if re-elected, he and his administration would use its "full potential" the new soil bank plan which he said this year is putting $260,000,000 into the hands of a half million farmers.

Eisenhower said the Republicans will maintain flexible price supports, keep the farm credit program "adjusted to the needs of family farmers," expand conservation and rural development programs and continue disaster relief to farmers.
