BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)

"You look worried," said Sunshine.

POOR MRS. SUNSHINE

Who lets himself give way to worry
Is seeking trouble in a hurry.
—Old Mother Nature.

"My dear, what are you worrying about?" asked Sunshine the Yellow Warbler. And he sang a few notes. He just had to.

"Who says I'm worrying?" retorted modest little Mrs. Sunshine. She was very busy. She was fastening some nice brown, soft fern cotton in place with some fine strong caterpillar silk. She was building a nest. Sunshine thought he was helping. Perhaps he was; he was singing.

"You look worried," said Sunshine. "You are worried. I can tell."

"I heard some unpleasant news," said Mrs. Sunshine.

"What?" asked Sunshine.

"I heard that Sally Sly the Cowbird has been snooping around in the Old Orchard," replied Mrs. Sunshine.

"What if she has?" replied Sunshine. "Black Pussy the Cat has been prowling around there. Blacky the Crow has been there too, and you know how well he loves eggs and young birds too. But you aren't worrying about either of them, so why worry about Sally Sly?"

"They wouldn't be looking for our nest, but you know as well as I do that Sally Sly would rather find our nest than any other nest in the Old Orchard," said Mrs. Sunshine.

Sunshine chuckled. "She knows a good thing when she sees it," said he.

"Well, I hope she doesn't see this one," said Mrs. Sunshine as she reached to snap up a green worm that was dangling at the end of a silken thread. Then she went to look for some more material.

The nest was almost finished and a daintier nest was never seen. Tiny bits of grey birch bark had been fastened to the outside. This was fastened on with silk. The inside Mrs. Sunshine had taken extra pains with. It was lined with the finest of fine grasses, a few soft dainty little feathers, a little hair, and some down from certain plants. She had built many nests but never one quite so perfect as this. When at last it was done she showed it to Sunshine with no little pride. Of course Sunshine told her it was wonderful, and it really was, when you think that all she had to make that nest with were eight toes with their little curved claws, and a bill. She shaped it with her breast, turning round and round.

All the time she had been at work, and while looking for things to build it of, she had kept watch for Sally Sly but had seen nothing of her. When she went to her nest she didn't go straight there. Each time she went a different way and all the time she was watching with

Contract Bridge

"PREVENTIVE" DOUBLES

There are cases in which it may be wise to make a slightly unsound penalty double for the main purpose of stopping partner from bidding what he has indicated he intends to bid. This sort of "preventive double," however, must be handled with great care! Observe the outcome when the double is made at the wrong time:

North dealer.
North-South vulnerable and 40 on score.

	♠ A Q 9 5 4 2 ♥ 6 3 ♦ K Q 5 ♣ Q 9
♠ 7 6 3 ♥ K Q 9 8 2 ♦ — ♣ 8 7 6 4 3	N W E S	♠ K J 10 ♥ J 10 7 5 4 ♦ 10 8 3 ♣ A 10
	♠ 8 ♥ A ♦ A J 9 7 6 4 2 ♣ K J 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 N T	2 ♦	2 ♥
2 ♠	3 ♥	4 ♦	4 ♥
Dbl. (!)	Pass	Pass	Pass

This was a striking victory for the East-West pair, especially in view of the fact that North-South could have made six diamonds without even a finesse!

North, attempting to justify his double, said that he had taken that action because of the "minimum" nature of his own opening bid, and because he felt that he should warn South about that "minimum." North went on to say that he had rebid his spades only because of their length, but that when South could not support the suit, and when in addition, it appeared that the opponents were simply "pushing" and taking a sacrifice, the double had seemed the safest course.

Perhaps it is unnecessary to say that this was so much nonsense! If North felt that his hand did not justify further offensive bidding he certainly could pass over four hearts! Actually, of course, he should have raised diamonds, and South, who had been going slowly throughout the early rounds would have uncovered his real strength with a jump to six diamonds.

As it was, South might have gone on in his seven-card suit, but, as he explained later, the double made him feel that he would find a singleton diamond in North's hand and that the opponents might go down substantially.
