MOUSE-HUNTING.

It was midnight, deep and still, in the mansion of Mrs. Partington, on a cold night in March. So profound was the silence that it awakened Mrs. P., and she raised herself upon her elbow to listen.

Now if there is an animal in the catalogue of creation that she dreads and detests it is a mouse. As she heard the sound of the nibble by the window, she arose again upon her elbow, and cried "Shoo! Shoo!" energetically several times.

All again was silent, and the clock, giving an admonitory tremble, struck twelve.

Nibble, nibble, nibble!—again that sound. The old lady sighed as she hurried her other shoe at her invisible annoyance. It was all without avail, and "shooing" was bootless, for the sound came again to her wakeful ear.

The reader's own imagination, if he has an imagination skilled in limning, must draw the picture of the old lady while upon this exploring expedition,—"accouted as she was," in search of the ridiculous mouse.

Satisfying herself that the mouse must have left the room, she closed the door and again sought repose. How gratefully a warm bed feels, when exposure to the night air has chilled us, as we crawl to its enfolding covert.

She was again near the attainment of the state when dreams are rife, when close by her chamber door outside she heard that hateful nibble renewed which had marred her peace before.

Convinced that she was now rid of him for the night, she returned to bed and composed herself for a good sleep. The room grew dim, in the weariness of his spirit, the chest of drawers in the corner was fast losing its identity and becoming something else; in a moment more she nibble, nibble, nibble! again outside of the chamber door, as the clock in the next room struck two!

THE PIG-STY.—The pig-sty should be arranged on one side of the barnyard, so as to allow the pig manure to be mixed with that of the horse and cow, as they severally accumulate.

Slowly and sadly she marched up stairs, with her shoe all sullied and gory; and the watch, who saw through the front door squares, told us this part of the story.

Sarab-nading Extraordinary.—Vake, lady, vake! The moon is high, the twinklin' stars are beamin', while now and then across the sky a meteor are streamin'!

The principal of an academy gave a pupil who was an aspirant for the situation of school-teacher a certificate, which said, "this young man is capable of filling any position for which he is qualified."

Artemus Ward said that the man who wrote, "I'm saddest when I sing," was a fool to sing much.

Mrs. Partington wants to know if the Pope sends any of his bulls to the cattle show.

Agricultural.

SYSTEM ON THE FARM.

There are a thousand little things that really do not take any time at all to attend to, because they come in as a part of one's general management and occupy odd hours only.

A farmer who keeps his tools scattered about, and who suffers the hay to go to waste on the barn-floor, will justify it on the ground of want of time; but the fact is, a reasonable degree of order and neatness saves time; and not only that, but it makes the difference between success and failure in any farming enterprise.

In conducting any farm, many things have to be done that do not in themselves pay any immediate profit.

Flourish and yield good crops. If the pastures are cleared of brush and mulleins, they carry more stock, and the good crops of hay and the good pastures put on flesh, and beef and mutton, which, in the form of these products, or in the form of milk, or wool, must be expected to pay in dollars and cents.

ROOTS AND STOCK RAISING.—The Canada Farmer says: "It is impossible to keep stock advantageously without roots." This fact, and the fact also that roots play such an important part in a judicious rotation, ought to induce more attention to them.

THE PIG-STY.—The pig-sty should be arranged on one side of the barnyard, so as to allow the pig manure to be mixed with that of the horse and cow, as they severally accumulate.
