

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

The presentation of The Three Musketeers at the Opera House last night by the Richards Stock Company was such as to please the audience and to win many expressions of approval from those present. The play was carried out with plenty of dash and D'Artagnan won his way into the sympathy and favor of his audience. The parts of Lady de Winter and Anne of Austria were well sustained, and a capital impersonation of the crafty Richelieu strengthened the work of the cast. The other members of the Company gave good support. Specialties that provoked much amusement were given between the acts. Last night's performance and the way it was received entitles the Company to expect that full houses should greet their appearance to-night and to-morrow night, when the Black Flag and Faust, two masterpieces, will be put on the stage.

Russia's Persistence.

The persistence of Russia cannot but be admired. While Great Britain and the United States, Japan, Germany, France and Austria are talking about the future of China, and whether there should be partition, or a division of "spheres of influence," Russia has moved her feet many miles into the Chinese back yard, and is said to be gathering an army of 375,000 men to hold what she has and take what she can get.
