C-O-C-S Niatox
 DUST OR SPRAY
Your POTATO PLANTS LIKE IT

Potato plants like C-O-C-S because it lets them grow unhindered. Growing is their most important, their only job. As the plants grow, potatoes develop. That means a full crop of good potatoes.

C-O-C-S gives the plants the fullest protection against early and late blight. C-O-C-S Niatox controls potato beetle, flea-beetle and leaf hopper, as well as early and late blight.

EASY TO USE

You can work with light, fluffy C-O-C-S Niatox in any weather, dry or wet, as long as you can work on the field. Adheres to plants, wet or dry.

picked up the scissors, went out and cut the yarn off at the line and eventually it all disappeared into the tree top.

I wonder, will Mrs. Blackbird say when she has company, "My dear, don't you like the reddish cast of my wallpaper? It's so much nicer than the ordinary brown or gray walls, don't you think?"

2. Tuesday: Saw a brand new baby last week. Something nicer than the nicest day in June is a new baby, don't you agree? His mother had books of all sorts about baby care. All were very interesting to me. A good hint in one of them was this: Make a sweater for the baby's bottle out of a wool sock, or knit a covering for the bottle. It provides a better grip for the baby and protects the bottle if it should fall. This brand new mom I visited had an ordinary muffin tin painted blue, and in each section had odds and ends needed in the nursery. Another idea I snatched to pass along was this: Instead of sand-papering the soles on baby's new shoes, they are less likely to slip on polished floors when in the toddler stage, if you put a broad strip of adhesive tape across the sole of each shoe. Makes climbing stairs safer too!

3. Wednesday: Some entries from an old Home Magazine edited in 1899—"A young man, or any man for that matter, in his shirt sleeves indoors, in the presence of ladies is distinctly and absolutely out of place, no matter what the temperature!". Entry No. 2: No silk is true mourning unless finished with a dull luster. After a death in the family, ruffles are not worn for at least six months and woollen fabric are considered the most suitable wear. No. 3: Says Mrs. Rarer, a cooking expert, "I certainly consider cakes injurious; icing on the top makes them even worse. While I fully realize that many people still consider cake making a necessity, I am quite sure that the next generation will look at this from a different standpoint." What would the poor lady do, if she picked up some of today's magazines—and saw some of the toothsome delights pictured there!

4. Thursday: At a busy intersection in Buffalo, New York, an old man stared timidly at swiftly moving traffic, then approached a young soldier whose left sleeve was empty. "Son, would you be kind enough to help me across the street?" he asked. "My eyes have been botherin' me lately." "Sure," grinned the young fellow. Taking the old man's arm, he steered him expertly across the street. A friend of the old gentleman's hurried to catch up with him. "You fraud," he said, "you've been crossing that busy intersection for years." The old fellow took his pipe from his mouth and spoke deliberately. "Well, I'll tell you how it is," he said. "I've seen that young fellow around, and I know he's pretty sensitive about that empty sleeve. Sorta lost his confidence. He got it back for a spell there when he helped me across the street, and I figure it'll be harder to lose it next time. I just edged him along toward the time he'll have it back for keeps!"

cal Association, Dr. J. H. Macdermott, editor, states: "The human foot is to a great extent an unexplained area in medicine. The medical student receives full training in the anatomy of the foot and its relation to the function of the body generally, but the relation of the foot to general diseases is not taught."

However, we are all now beginning to realize the importance of the foot to health and industry as a cause of human disability and suffering and great economic loss. "Industry finds that foot ailments are the cause of much loss of time, poor work, and accidents. Workmen's Compensation Boards are interesting themselves in the prevention of crippling through injuries of the foot. The Armed Forces, in the last War, found a tremendous amount of incapacity during service as a result of unstable and weak feet."

As it is natural for all to consult their physicians when any part of the body is suffering or disabled, they find that the physician is not often interested nor is he equipped to treat painful feet unless, of course, the condition is due to rheumatism or arthritis. Accordingly the patient is sent to a graduate chiropodist who fortunately understands the dynamics and also diseases and injuries of the foot, and is equipped to treat them properly.

Dr. Macdermott states further that in industry it has been found that sore feet as a cause of absenteeism are responsible to the degree that one man in ten is absent from two to seven days a month.

As most foot disabilities first occur in childhood, it is unfortunate that while heart, chest, and spine are carefully examined at school, "little or no provision exists at present for systematic surveys of children's feet at home, in schools or elsewhere. The chiropodist of today bears no resemblance to the "corn doctor" of thirty or more years ago." The graduate chiropodist today must have adequate academic training and a four-year course in his special field of chiropody.

ing me as if I were a child. At my age a girl is grown up and shouldn't be expected to obey her parents at all times. Last week I had to stay in for several days because of disobedience. I sneaked out to a party I had been forbidden to attend, and when I came home Dad was waiting for me. He said it wasn't the first time I had pulled the same trick (which is true), so he proceeded to spank me. That's the first time I've been punished like that since I was a child.

ANSWER: Hurray for Dad! A father who refuses to be bamboozled by his teen-age daughter deserves an accolade. Too many parents laugh off incidents like this, instead of taking drastic steps.

If you persist in acting like a child, you deserve a child's punishment. Believe me, there's nothing adult in sneaky dating. And remember, the Commandment doesn't specify that children honor their parents to the age of 13. There's no age limit set.

DEAR MISS DIX: What is the correct way for my son to address his uncle, who is a dentist? One nephew calls him "Uncle Doc." It doesn't sound right to me. I prefer "Uncle Ted."

MRS. C. C.

ANSWER: Right you are! "Uncle Ted" would be correct.
