

MR. AND MRS. LLOYD SHIELDS

Wedding Vows Pledged At Two Ring Ceremony

The First Baptist Church, Charlottetown, was the scene of a pretty wedding recently when Mardie Dianne MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Borden MacDonald, Parkdale, became the bride of Lloyd Augustus Shields, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shields, Charlottetown. Rev. Malcolm F. Harlow officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the traditional Wedding March, played by Mrs. Leigh V. Dingwell. She wore a street length dress of white lace over peau-de-seau with wrist length chiffon sleeves. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a white lace crown, caught with brilliants, and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Marjorie MacInnis, the bride's only attendant, chose a two piece suit of white lace over taffeta, with pink and white accessories and carried a large nosegay of white mums and pink roses. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bride.

The groom was attended by Sterling MacNeven, and the ushers were Ralph MacDonald, brother of the bride and Ralph Williams, uncle of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. MacDonald chose a three piece navy dress, featuring a white and navy figured top, pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The groom's mother wore a two piece suit of light blue brocade silk, with white accessories and her corsage was of white mums.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a three tiered wedding cake topped with miniature bride and groom centered the bride's table.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Sterling MacNeven and responded to by the groom. Gail Carver circulated the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip through the Maritimes, the bride chose a beige cotton sleeveless dress of lace over acetate jersey, with matching long sleeved jacket, and red accessories. Her corsage was of red roses.

Out of town guests were aunt and uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Williams and daughter, Kathy, of Bagotville, Que.

MARY HAWORTH

Mother Worried About Daughter Being Molested

Dear Mary Haworth: I am greatly troubled about a 8-year-old boy in our neighborhood who has molested our 4-year-old daughter.

We moved into their neighborhood three months ago. We have five children and Sally, 8, is the middle child.

At the time the trouble started I was busy with moving and having a new baby—and I blame myself to some extent for not being more alert to the situation.

The lad is the younger of two brothers, the elder of whom is away at college; so he is reared somewhat as an only child. He is a classmate of Sally's and they soon became friends, playing after school at his house or ours, but mostly his.

When finally, tearfully, Sally confided in me, I telephoned the boy's mother, in friendly spirit but firmly intent upon corrective action. Meanwhile I'd talked to my husband, who was much upset.

The mother's attitude was quite surprising, very tolerant, in fact permissive. I would say I was stunned. She spoke of her several years' psychoanalytic experience and his happy outcome.

Our next-door neighbor tells me the boy has been building a reputation along this line for at least two years; and other boys avoid him. We have considered transferring Sally to another class, his teacher says he has a crush on Sally; but we don't want to overemphasize our concern. What do you advise? E.S.

Dear E.S.: As written, your letter constituted a pornographic document. In condensing it for discussion, just on the chance that hapless children are involved in the sickness described, I have concisely eliminated the suggestive details.

This I mention because, to be frank, I have a strong surmise that you've submitted the story with baiting intent, complexly motivated, from sexual, perverse viewpoint even, supposing the central facts are true, or approximately a neighborhood you know about.

Well, with that preliminary record, now that we understand each other, my advice is (to any and all parents facing the problem you relate): Get family relations counselling help, on a firsthand continuing basis, in learning how to provide your emotionally threatened children with the truly humane, constructive parental protectiveness they are entitled to.

Taking your story at face value, speaking specifically to points you raise: Assuming it is possible, as you imply, to transfer Sally to another class, away from daily unavoidable proximity to the source of her dismay, I recommend the step. You needn't be heavily emphatic about it. You don't owe the neighbors tireless explanations. Conferences with school authorities properly should be private. Say to Sally, in effect, "This is better; you can make all new friends and let what's his-name find other friends too. You can forget about him and the worry he caused you."

As to the other mother's broadly permissive policy relative to her disturbed son's precocious delinquent activity, it reflects (on her part) equal measures of moral illiteracy, parental irresponsibility, psychological immaturity, emotional instability and bravura pretense to all-embracing social sophistication.

But on the score of bonafide seasoned worldly wisdom, notably in the field of sex experience, the eminent authority Somerset Maugham (novelist, playwright, self-made millionaire and bon vivant) wrote long ago, in his autobiography, "The Summing Up," that straightforward goodness is the most compelling human quality. M.H.
