

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MAY 9, 1890.

Hon. W. W. Lord.

HAVING reached the great age of ninety-three years, the Hon. W. W. Lord fell asleep this afternoon. We have not time to-day to make a sufficient biographical sketch of one who, in the time of his strength, acted so prominent a part in the commerce and politics of this Province.

It will be noted that his remains are to be deposited at the place of his birth, the thriving settlement in which he ever exhibited the greatest interest.

The McKimley Bill.

The Clerk of the Committee on Ways and Means expresses the following important opinion, which agrees with the statement published by THE EXAMINER yesterday.

Numerous inquiries are received from various sections of the country as to the time when the bill will go into effect. The date specified is July 1, 1890. This, however, has no special significance, and was inserted as usual in every case of this kind merely to fill in a blank.

The Election Laws.

A large part of the late session of the Legislature was occupied in the revision of the election laws. Many changes were made in points of detail, all with the object of improving the conduct of elections.

These changes are all in the right direction. The Government party deserve credit, particularly for that which has been made in respect to mortgages. This change was carried in the face of very strong opposition.

The contest now close at hand in Ontario will be the first general election there under manhood suffrage. It seems likely that the Conservatives will win.

Notes and Comments.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Mail says: "Reports from Prince Edward Island state that large numbers of cattle are dying, entailing great loss on many farmers. It is supposed that poisoned fodder is the cause of the havoc amongst the cattle."

The decline of the British hop industry has lately been the subject of enquiry by a parliamentary committee. Evidence was given to show that the reduced demand for hops was not through the use of hop substitutes in brewing, but owing to a change in the taste of the public, which now prefers a much less heavy beer than formerly.

The temperance people of England were all up in arms on the 5th inst. Telegrams rained down from all quarters of the country upon the members of the House of Commons, urging them to oppose with might and main the new licensing scheme of the Government.

Supreme Court.

MAY 9.

Elizabeth Rattray vs. John Healy. A rule for new trial was, this morning, refused.

In the matter of the application of John Burke to set aside an award of arbitrators in a suit between applicant and one Thomas N. Donahoe, the Court, on motion of Mr. Morson, granted a rule nisi, returnable Trinity Term next.

Annie Hughes vs. James Farrell. Action for breach of promise of marriage. Tried at Georgetown October term, when verdict was given for plaintiff for $700. On motion of Mr. Stewart, for defendant, the court grants a rule nisi for new trial, returnable Trinity term, on the grounds that the amount of damages awarded was excessive, and that new evidence had been discovered.

Patrick O'Mullin vs. John Joy. Tried at Summerside in October last, when verdict was found for defendant. Rule nisi for new trial, or that verdict be entered for plaintiff, granted Michaelmas term. Mr. McLean to-day shows cause against the rule; Mr. Hodgson in support thereof.

A Maiden and a Rosebud.

A rosebud opening with blush of pink. The petals washed with dew, a perfume rare, So fair and sweet it was the morning sun That withered up the grass left it more fair.

Alas! before the rose in beauty bloomed, A worm had eaten through the heart and left That which once so sweet, and fair, and pure, Of all its former loveliness bereft.

A maiden young, and beautiful and good; Her chiefest beauty that of grace and truth, The charm of modesty, the gift of love Kept her unsullied in her early youth.

But worldliness has eaten through her heart; The soul is but a ragged-edged thing. How small it is and Heaven promised once The fairest beauty of its blossoming.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Temperance Question.

SIR,—What a pity it is that a question of philanthropy, such as Temperance, is cannot be fairly discussed without so sad an exhibition of insincerity as has marked several letters lately published in THE EXAMINER; and outside of that, the exceeding unloving insinuation freely made in society by temperance (?) advocates, that the young barrister, who has had the courage to express openly his convictions, has been actuated either by his affinity with the "rum party," or is making a professional bid,—he acutely foreseeing that teetotal principles will not, for a long time, be in the ascendancy.

When the endeavor is made to injure a young man's character by reflecting unfairly and after the most un-Christian-like style, upon his motives, no language too strong can be used in condemnation of such a course. The cause of temperance is good—yea, holy—and is grievously injured in the eyes of the people by such evil methods.

It is the Christian privilege, freedom, of an individual, or of a whole community of such individuals, to deny to themselves the use of wines and beers. It is not their privilege to force any one else, or any number of persons into the same custom. Upon this point British freedom is Christian liberty. Again apply a little logic to prohibition. Intoxicating drinks are often injurious and even fatal, and, moreover, bring misery by their misuse upon whole homes. Therefore the manufacture and sale of them shall be prohibited.

True, temperance reform has an infinitely better method of reasoning than this. True and wise Christian reform knows the resources of evil too well to waste time in the vain task of abolishing the devil and his works in any other way than that of changing the hearts of men. If temperance (?) enthusiasts could and would use Christian persuasion, Christian love, Christian solicitude for the personal salvation of the rum-seller and drunkard, and learn to be charitable towards those who are in mental conflict with them as to exact methods of philanthropy; if they could be less jealous of one another, and more loving towards all, we should be in a short time much nearer to the millennium than centuries of the present form of crusading will fetch the world to that love-triumphant day.
