Sub Sinking Planned In Thresher Hunt

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The submarine Toro left the Philadelphia naval base under tow Tuesday to be deliberately sunk by the U.S. Navy in the Atlantic Ocean off Cape Cod.

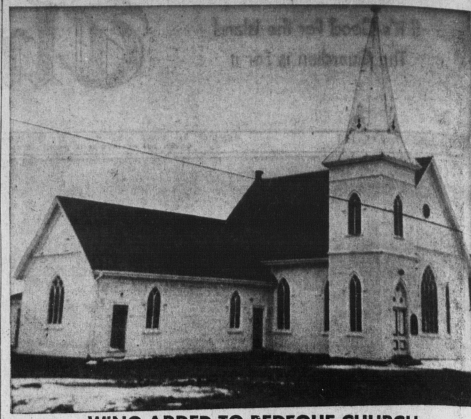

The navy hopes to track the Toro as it goes down in more than 8,000 feet of water and thus obtain a clue to the location of the nuclear-powered submarine Thresher.

The Thresher with its crew of 129 men sank April 10. Sound waves from sonar equipment have located about a dozen potential targets about 200 miles off Cape Cod, which might be the Thresher, the navy says.

"Gary Genzert," a conventional submarine commissioned in 1944, is somewhat longer and wider than the Thresher. Once it reaches the bottom of the ocean, sonar waves will be bounced from it. These signals then will be compared with those obtained from other submarines. When a close match is obtained the bathyscaphe Trieste will be sent down for a close look.

Rector Stresses Need For Expansion At SDU

"St. Dunstan's University will carry a debt of approximately $400,000 in coming years in spite of a Canada Council grant of $25,000 and the generous donations of individuals," Right Rev. J. A. Sullivan, rector of the university, told the graduating class at the Commencement Exercises yesterday afternoon.

The bulk of the cost went to the construction of the new library building which "is almost completed, and with the remainder of the equipment installed, we hope to have it in time for the opening of the summer school early in July," Msgr. Sullivan said.

NEW BUILDINGS
 Even on this debt, he explained, the university had additional plans for new buildings, with science facilities being first in line. "We are taking this step, of course, because of need, but are especially encouraged in taking it as a result of the recent beneficence of one of our alumni, St. Clair Duffy," he said.

He also expressed his pleasure with the graduating class and said he felt "they had done an excellent job and not allowed themselves to be influenced by the distractions of present-day life."

In pointing out the purpose of the university he served a relatively small community in preparing our young men and women to take their part in all walks of life, and this is as vital today as in the past. But now,

Butter production dropped 10 per cent in this province for the first four months of the year, it was revealed yesterday by H.J. MacDonald, provincial dairy superintendent.

The 720,633 pounds manufactured to the end of April this year compares with the 806,111 pounds made to April 30 a year ago.

Across the nation, the dairy production was also dropping as a Dominion Bureau of Statistics report indicates the 18,527,000 pounds of milk produced in the first two months of this year compares with the 19,229,000 in the same period a year ago.

There is no indication what is responsible for the national production decline, but the reason here is described for the most part in the two words "poor weather. It is a dry result, the oil but impossible heavy harvesting conditions during the rainy summer of 1962.
