Michel Rings The Bell In Exciting Belltop Hairdo

"Thank goodness the waistline is back," says Michel International famous hair stylist. "Now we can return to the natural, feminine coiffure line, with the sophisticated look women adore."

And with that, he introduces his exciting new "Belltop," a variety of hair-dos all based on the youthful, flattering small-head look.

"No more artificial wigs," Michel of Helena Rubinstein declares. "No more the over-sized, unnatural head. I've done away with the tortured look. To me, the hair is a fine fabric and I treat it like soft and delicate silk."

"Belltop" was created by Michel in Paris and was presented at the top couturier houses where it was acclaimed an immediate success. "Belltop" fashions stem from short hair, cut in Michel's revolutionary half-pleated design, giving the effect of being longer in the back and shorter on the sides. Sides feature either the "swirl" effect, flipped out and up in a wing-like sweep, or "earloops," the soft cap look close to the head, cradling the ears.

At the neck, the "Belltop" is half-pleated with a duck-tail effect, or completely brushed up to reveal the soft hairline at the nape of the neck.

Above all, is the pointed bell top — a swirl, a peak, or a puff on the crown. The hairline can be smoothed back or brought forward with bangs — swept down, to the side, or V-shaped — resting gently on the forehead. It's a new, soft silhouette, designed for Spring by the famous Michel.

The fortunate thing about all this is that you don't have to know the mechanics of these appliances in order to enjoy them. After having used and enjoyed all the advantages that are at our very finger tips, I wonder how happy we would be in the world that existed one hundred years ago.

Reports Mrs. Cox then presented the Alpha chapter activities during the past year.

Mrs. Cecile Jones of Beta chapter read the "Message from Mrs. Ross." Mrs. Keith S. Rogers proposed a tribute to the founder, Mr. Walter W. Ross and then read the Founder's Day pledge.

Miss Lena C. McLure, the Social Sponsor, brought greetings from the Social Sponsor in Toronto of Beta Sigma Phi sorority, Mrs. Robert B. Messervy.

The happy and memorable evening was brought to a close by the president leading the members in the Closing Ritual and the Mizpah benediction.

The monthly meeting of Burton W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Lance Dalton, Monday, April 13, with seven members present. Meeting opened with the Institute Ode, followed by the Mary Stewart Collect in unison.

GOOD OLD DAYS

All of us, at some time or other wish that somehow we could bring back the good old days, complete with covered wagons and hoop skirts.

We sigh in envy as we think of our ancestors trekking across rough terrain, either on foot or horse back and living in a cabin which they thought luxurious if it boasted a table, chairs and a cook stove.

Some keep wishing themselves backward in time to the horse and buggy era, the cranked telephone, the old lamp lighter. They can recall the first car they ever saw, the first airplane, the first crystal radio set.

There is more to life than just the spinning Of daily tasks upon the spool of Time; If we would live our eyes and look around us We might catch a glimpse of things sublime.

There are mountains of the spirit made for climbing, There are quiet places where the soul may rest, And life's little garden spots of beauty Invite us through their gates, a welcome guest.

There are riches of the mind to gather From the printed wealth of man's great store — We may travel avenues of wisdom Down the years where men have passed before.

There are winged songsters to remind us That we may also sing our Maker's praise, And the golden mantle of the sunshine Is warm as His great love, which lighteth our ways.

There's more — much more to our days! The challenge Of living above earth's round of things is ours to grasp, and in those lifted moments It's then that we discover life has wings. Until Monday — — — Dairy, Goo-night.

ELLEN'S DIARY The Old Mustard Tin Is A Part Of Fishing

"The night looks promising... Here's hopin'!" Mack said "stepping off through the fetching all-iver of last night toward home... It is a well-beaten path the children follow to and from this old house — a nice path we consider, which leads beneath the white birch of their great-grandmother's planting to the house across the lane.

Summery conditions obtain now along it. But not long ago we saw Grandmother set boards end to end its length so that all might pass dry-shod there. Moonlight dappled the way for the lad mind and heart set ahead to the morning and its excursion to the fishing.

"A shower or so would set things to rights now, Ellen," James offered at breakfast. We had drawn the table up to the window which overlooks stream and mill and the scene of quiet field and woodland about.

Sunny the morning was, and fresh and as pretty as a new-gowned maid. "Yes," James said "we could do with a warm gentle rain."

But not today, the thought came to mind. Let it be blessed, with sunshine and loveliness throughout, so that lads might gather to shrines of memory the delights of a long Saturday spent along the reaches of stream. James poured an extra dot of cream to his tea. There was a step on the back verandah. The door opened and Mack breezed in.

"Would you happen to have... say, an old mustard tin I could use to hold bait?" he queried with a bright smile. "Was there ever day more delightful than this for him and Gage to spend in goodly part at the troutling along the farms, up and down the stream if the takings were not numerous there is still good promise ahead of other catches, as evidenced by the bites and the remembered tantalizing flashes of those Will-o'-the-wisps of all trouting, those "all of this long... big and speckled!" — the fish that got away.

And the day at Alderlea was full with the varied interests which served to pass so swiftly the hours and bear us once more up to week's close. Come to that up to harbor and quay — we have, quiet now our oars. Nice voyaging we have had on the way. Busy the season is on farms as indoors or out its folks go to the duties of their days.

These are most absorbing. Yet, as K.L. Ramsdell reminds us there is more to life than the work of our rounds.

There are mountains of the spirit made for climbing, There are quiet places where the soul may rest, And life's little garden spots of beauty Invite us through their gates, a welcome guest.

There are riches of the mind to gather From the printed wealth of man's great store — We may travel avenues of wisdom Down the years where men have passed before.
