

Russian Novelist Absent At Nobel Awards Dinner

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Russian poet-novelist Boris Pasternak, an absent winner, was honored along with seven attending in person at the 1958 Nobel awards ceremony in Stockholm's Concert Hall today.

Three Soviet physicists, three American scientists and a British chemist were handed cheques totalling $124,260 by Sweden's King Gustav VI on this 125th anniversary of the birth of Alfred Nobel, the dynamic inventor whose fortune finances the awards.

Secretary Anders Oesterling of the Royal Swedish Academy paid tribute to Pasternak, the author of the anti-Communist novel Doctor Zhi-ago who was forced by Soviet pressure to turn down the 1958 literature prize. The academy awarded the prize to Pasternak for his contribution to contemporary lyrics as well as to the great Russian epic tradition, Oesterling said in an unscheduled announcement near the end of the glittering ceremony.

DOESN'T WANT PRIZE
"The laureate thus appointed has, as is known, informed us that he does not want to receive the prize," the secretary said. "This refusal naturally does not change the validity of the award. For the academy there remains but to state with regret that the prize cannot be delivered."

Pasternak's $41,420, his heavy gold medal and leather-bound scroll are being held in trust for him in case he ever has a chance to accept them.

Soviet physicists P. A. Cherenkov, I. M. Frank and Igor Tamm came with the Kremlin's approval to collect the 1958 physics award.

They sat in a row of red plush seats on the laureates' platform with American Drs. George Beadle, Edward L. Tatum and Joshua Lederberg, joint winners of the prize in medicine and physiology, and Frederick Sanger, British winner of the chemistry prize.

HEREDITY RIDDLES
The three Americans, named for solving some of the basic riddles of heredity, were introduced by Torbjorn Caspersson, professor of medical cell research and genetics at the Caroline Institute.

The Russians, honored for discovery and subsequent study of the Cherenkov effect, were introduced by Prof. Kai Siegbahn, the 1924 winner of the Nobel prize in Physics. The Cherenkov effect deals with the effect of radiation on various fluids.

Sanger was introduced by Prof. Arne Tiselius of Uppsala University, the chemistry prize winner in 1948. He said Sanger's pioneering work on the structure of insulin, the protein that diabetics lack, had been like putting together a difficult puzzle.

FIGHT SUBWAY PLANS
TORONTO (CP) — Toronto's proposed east-west subway received a possible six-months setback Wednesday night when suburban New Toronto council voted to take an appeal against its financing to the Supreme Court of Canada.
