CARE FOR THE PREGNANT COW

During the last month of pregnancy and the first two weeks of lactation, cows deplete their systems of vitamins, minerals, trace elements and other nutrients to supply the requirements of the calf. In many cases, cows will run themselves down to the point where they come down with Milk Fever, Acetonemia and other post-calving conditions. The trend in modern Animal Husbandry is to treat the cow during this critical time by giving supplementary daily amounts of vitamins and minerals. In this way, the cow is receiving ample vitamins and minerals for both herself and her calf—it's really treating the cow—to save herself and her calf. For this pre-natal care of the cow, Nixon Laboratories have developed—PREVENTEX POWDER for Pregnant Cows. PREVENTEX POWDER contains Vitamins A, D, E, B Complex, C with the trace minerals Iron, Copper, Iodine, Manganese, Potassium, Magnesium, Sulphur and others in a Calcium Phosphate Base. PREVENTEX POWDER is easy to use—just mix it with the grain ration and it costs only a few cents per cow per day. Why not start using PREVENTEX POWDER on your pregnant cows now to avoid the birth of weak calves and stop problems with the cow at and after calving. We absolutely guarantee satisfactory results or your money refunded!

brakes on many of the social and economical revisions started by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and advocated by his successor, Harry S. Truman. Few such legislative changes have been enacted since the outbreak of the fighting in Korea, or even the end of the Second World War.

Emphasis May Shift Now the emphasis on legislative objectives may shift. That is not to say that a drive will start to dismantle all the Roosevelt-Truman plans. Eisenhower and Stevenson were in agreement on the need for such matters as social security, farm price supports and the development of natural resources.

The winning candidate took the stand, however, that there should be a maximum of local participation in these affairs a minimum of federal interference in their development.

The Second World War brought a practical end to the "New Deal." But after Roosevelt's death and the war's end Truman revived most of F. D. R.'s recommendations under the title of the "Fair Deal."

But this program hardly got off the ground. Congress was more interested in other post-war issues—getting the fighting men home, ending economic controls, providing benefits for the veterans.

The election of a Republican Congress in 1946, the 80th, was a telling blow to the "Fair Deal." A coalition of Republicans and Conservative Democrats has been in practical control of the last two Congresses. Most of Truman's suggestions were rebuffed.

Many Major Issues The newly-chosen Congress faces a half-dozen major issues, including a thorough review of the machinery for half-war mobilization.

In addition to major international and military problems, the legislators must decide whether to continue the present high tax rates and what to do about wage and price controls.

They probably will consider changes in the controversial Taft-Hartley Act.

The Eisenhower triumph was a solid, massive sweep of large states and small, from Maine to New York and Pennsylvania, westward across the great plains and farm areas, and up and down the Pacific coast.

Eisenhower pulverized the south which Democrats always have claimed as strictly their own. He captured Florida and Virginia quickly, then added Texas and Tennessee to his election trophies.

For the 62-year-old war hero, who pulled off his battle jacket and turned politician only last June, the torrent of votes seemed to have sprung from two main factors.

A tremendous popularity built on a warm, friendly personality. A rampant sentiment throughout the country that it was time for a change.

Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic presidential candidate rejected by the voters, was gallant in defeat. He accepted the decision of the electorate "gladly" and promised his support as an American to the president-elect.

Invited To White House President Truman, who fought Eisenhower tooth and nail in the campaign, invited the General to the White House to discuss world peace and suggested that Eisenhower send a representative to help in preparation of the budget Truman must present to Congress before he steps out.

All that was for the future. Today, with General Ike the victor in the biggest battle of his life since turning back Nazism in Europe in the Second World War, the teetering totter of the congressional vote-counting held the interest of the country.

The trend from the start favored Republican aspirants but it was far from the sweep of the presidential decision. It was almost as though the voters, who certainly liked Ike, were hesitant in choosing men to support him.

With the final standing in the Senate Democrats 47, Republicans 48, that decisive vote in that House may be that of California's Richard Nixon, the Republican vice-president-elect. As Senate president, he has no vote except in the case of a tie.

Oregon's Wayne Morse deserted the Republicans to support Stevenson in the election. He says he now is an independent, free to vote either with the Democrats or with the Republicans. If he votes with the Democrats, that means a deadlock with Nixon tipping the scales to the Republicans.

In the present Congress, to be succeeded Jan. 3 by the one elected Tuesday, the Democrats hold 49 of the 96 Senate seats, the Republicans 47. One-third of the membership is elected every two years and this year, 35 seats were at stake—32 plus elections to fill three unexpired terms.

Maine, getting its ticks in early as it always does, voted Sept. 8, electing a senator, three representatives and a governor, all Republican.

Needed Sweep With Democratic "holdovers" and seats usually safe for the Democrats, the Republicans needed the sweep they got to make inroads on Democratic senatorial strength. That they would wrest control seemed unlikely before the election.

In the House of Representatives of 435 members, the Democrats hold 230 seats to 200 for the Republicans in the present Congress. There is one independent and four vacancies. A new house is elected every two years.

President Truman moved for national unity. He proposed that the man who will succeed him, the man he battled for one end of the country to the other, come to the White House at an early date for consultations to demonstrate for all the world that "our people are united in the struggle for freedom and peace."

The President asked Eisenhower to send an emissary to sit in on government financial planning. He offered the General the White House plane for a trip to Korea. He had words of praise for the defeated Stevenson, calling him "a great new leader who will contribute much to our national life in the years ahead."

The voters' decision to send Eisenhower, who led a "great crusade" against an administration that had been in power for 20 years, ending an existing, stormy chapter in U. S. history.

Wars—hot and cold, declared and undeclared—had put the

IN MEMORIAM

HAROLD C. LEARD "The many friends and relatives in Prince Edward Island of Harold C. Leard of Chehalis, Washington, will regret to learn of his death on October 22nd at the hospital in Centralia, Washington.

Mr. Leard was born on June 13, 1896 at Bridgetown, P. E. I., the son of the late Wm. E. Leard and his wife Annie Ayers, and moved in 1907 with his parents to Western Canada where he resided at Govan, Saskatchewan, and Beatty, Saskatchewan. It was his great pleasure this past summer to visit the Island for the first time since 1919 and in company with his wife and his sister to review the scenes of his childhood and to meet again many friends and relatives.

The late Mr. Leard had a varied career, which included motor mechanics in Detroit, wheat ranching in Oklahoma, and finally farming in Chehalis, Washington, where for the past sixteen years he ran a successful chicken ranch.

In 1925 he married Velma R. Hostetter of Knowles, Oklahoma, who survives him in addition to a son, Marion, at home; a daughter, Mrs. Lillian Francy of Onalaska, Washington; and a sister, Mrs. William Lobb (Ethel) of Melfort, Sask.

A life-long member of the Methodist Church, Mr. Leard brought many fine gifts, including considerable musical talent, to the service of his church in the several communities in which he lived. His long struggle against ill health and his cheerful determination to make the best of everything won the respect and admiration of all who knew him. His passing has left many sad hearts in homes where he was well-known and well-loved.

The funeral service on Saturday, October 25th was conducted by Rev. D. Fife when two of Mr. Leard's favourite hymns, "Lead Kindly Light" and "The Home of the Soul" were sung. Many beautiful flowers added their tribute of silent beauty. Interment was in Colquhoun Cemetery. The following were the pallbearers: Harlan Roberts, Alonzo Corp, Sherman Stirling, Russell Morton, James Sablin, and Frank Montgomery.

IN MEMORIAM

JAMES FRANCIS MOSSEY On 24th September 1952 the death occurred at the City Hospital, Charlottetown, of James Francis Mossey, Bothwell, P. E. I., at the age of seventy-seven years. May his soul rest in peace.

In the regretted absence through illness of the devoted pastor, Reverend Ronald J. Macdonald, Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated at Saint Columba by Reverend George Macdonald assisted by Reverend Pius Murnaghan as Deacon and Reverend Wilfred Keefe as sub-Deacon. Right Reverend James Murphy and Reverend Fennelly Mullaly were in the sanctuary, while Reverend Bernard J. Gillis, Reverend L. J. Ayers and Mr. Michael MacFadyre assisted the Saint Mary's Male Choir of Souris. Reverend Sister Saint George, Congregation of Notre Dame, presided at the organ. Burial took place in the parish cemetery.

The pallbearers were Columba Campbell, Roy Dixon, John E. Fry, George Ernest MacDonald, Percy MacDonald and Stuart MacGregor.

Mr. Mossey is survived by his wife, three sons, Basil, Freeman and Bernard; four daughters, Catherine (Mrs. Lewis Grindle), Cecilia (Mrs. Lewis Stewart), Sister Saint Sarah Marie (Marguerite), Congregation of Notre Dame, and (Viola) Sister Viola Mossey of the Sisters of Service.

In his youth the deceased settled at Bothwell. The good people there and in the surrounding communities encouraged and supported him through joy and sorrow and nobody could have been more kind on all occasions. None knew better than they the qualities of his nature and his wish to be a useful, God-fearing citizen in the community and with the people he loved dearly. Their appreciation was manifest in the large numbers in which they came, old and young, to pay their last respects and in the number of mass offerings, floral tributes and expressions of sympathy received by the bereaved family.

On a date dedicated by the Catholic Church to Our Lady, Ransom the valiant heart gave up the fight and the tranquil soul sought peace eternal. Although those at the bedside in this awesome hour realized with sore hearts that they were parting physically with a kind father, a faithful brother and a good friend, few tears could be shed for it was known that a boyhood appointment with God was being fulfilled. Because it was well known that across the years the whole life of the departing one had been a preparation for death, and it seemed as though the light he was leaving behind him was already shining upon the paths of men. It was also known that in his family life, extending over fifty years, he had virtuously insisted upon daily family prayer, truth and honesty in business dealings, charity and neighbourliness with all. In this he was devotedly assisted in the earlier years by a wife and mother of cherished memory, and for the past thirty-five years by a loyal second partner to whom a heavy debt of thanks as a stepmother is affectionately acknowledged by her family.

Thus ended the earthly life of another Christian gentleman; and that is the legacy of example, of public admiration and praise, he has left his descendants to emulate. In going to render an account of its stewardship such a soul could say trustingly in God "It is a better thing I do than I have ever done; it is a far, far better land I go to than I have ever known."
