AMHERST, N. S.—(Special)—Allison Profit of Freetown Thursday showed the senior and grand championship Holstein bull at the Maritime Winter Fair. The animal was Blackford Duke. He was bred and raised on Mr. Profit's Willow Farm but is now owned jointly by Mr. Profit and Courtney B. Lusby of Amherst, N.S. The Duke is a son of Bond Haven Rag Apple Creator, one of the sires brought to Prince Edward Island several years ago by the Superior Holstein Bull Club.

Over the junior champions, Dickie Brothers of Truro had the junior champion in Cobequid Salada. Ed Dickie of Truro had the reserve junior champion in Bonnie Colantha Emperor. Both were senior calves. Dickie Brothers also had the best junior calf and the best junior yearling, William Lucy, Mouth of Keswick, N. B., had the best senior yearling. Dickie Brothers also had the best two-year-old bull. The third place bull in his class to the grand champion and reserve was Abegweit Borden Arch, bred in the Bunbury Farm herd of the late Senator J. Walter (Continued on Page 11 col. 3)

They were brought up against very stiff competition but had some good placings. They scored their best of the day when they placed first and third in the class for junior heifer calves. They had the third and fourth places in the class for junior bull calves, had the fourth place senior yearling as well as the fourth place aged bull. They placed sixth in the senior herd.

Blackford Duke won his class here Thursday after a terrific battle with Ottawa Rag Apple Alert, shown by the Central Artificial Breeding Unit at Fredericton, N. B. He was shown Thursday by Barney Carter who has often shown in recent years for the late Senator J. Walter Jones. The Rag Apple bull was bigger and had a better scale in the opinion of the judge, W. A. Baker of Exeter, New Hampshire, but he faulted him for his hind legs.

Baker concentrated on the two animals for all of ten minutes before finally placing the Duke on top. They were a magnificent pair of bulls, the American judge observed. They were easy winners in the championship class and Baker did not take a minute to place them grand champion and reserve.

His final work, the design for a stained-glass window commissioned by an industrialist, was almost finished. He had returned to his studio here after spending the summer at his villa near Venice. Venice, eight miles northwest of Nice, is the site of an unusual Roman Catholic chapel which he designed several years ago.
