The bidding:
 South West North East
 1♣ Pass 1♣ Pass
 1♦ Pass 2♦ Pass
 2NT Pass 3♣ Pass

Opening lead—six of spades. From a team of four match comes this hand which contains some good play.

West (Richard Kahn) led a spade even though South had bid the suit. East (Edgar Kaplan) made the steep play of the hand when he put on the ten and not the ace. Declarer was afraid the ace was with West and won the opening trick with the king.

South decided to go after the diamond suit. He led the king and another diamond, losing the finesse to the queen. Kaplan then played the ace and another spade, and declarer went down one—100 points—losing four spades and a diamond.

Of course, declarer could have made the hand by attacking clubs instead of diamonds. In fact, the club play was preferable, since a successful finesse against the king was all that was needed to make the contract. As against this, the diamond finesse involved a favorable suit break also.

Had Kaplan taken the ace on the opening lead, South would have stayed off the spade return, and would inevitably have made the contract by force.

At the other table the same contract was reached with the North-South cards by Kahn-Kaplan's teammates. The opening lead was the nine of hearts, and South (Norman Kay) made six no-trumps!

Kay played a low heart from dummy and won with the ace. He led queen of clubs and took West's king with the ace. The Jack of diamonds was then led and successfully finessed.

A diamond to the king was followed by three rounds of clubs and three more diamonds. Dummy was by now reduced to the deuce of spades and K-J of hearts.

East was down to the ace of spades the Q-10 of hearts. Kay played a spade from dummy and East had to win with the ace and return a heart into dummy's K-J.

So Kay scored twelve tricks for 600 points too net a gain on the deal of 700 points. Both pairs on his team did their share to produce a well-earned swing.
