Turkey Can Be Part Fare "The Second Time Around"

Sometimes, it pays to plan two company dinners in a row. After all, the turkey is ready to eat; housecleaning, polishing the good silver, bringing out the good china, and there is usually lots of food that can be party fare for a second time around.

According to entertaining experts, Thanksgiving is the perfect time for this two-for-the-work-one idea. For the big holiday, there's nothing like having the family sit down for a traditional turkey dinner with all the fixings. Then, for a second time around, the turkey can be party fare for a second time around.

"Party Turkey Casserole," an easy party-pretty main dish, it was developed by our home economist to help you budget further, more deliciously. Those friends invited for the casual buffet dinner will think you're very gracious and clever hostess.

"Party Turkey Casserole" is basically a combination of diced turkey and instant mashed potatoes, highlighted with good herbs and seasoning. Criss-crossing the casserole is an unusual topping made of French chives, Sour Cream Sauce Mix flavoured with prepared mustard. It's a wonderful idea to meet your family will enjoy, too.

To provide a well-balanced meal, the rest of the menu might include buttered peas, tomato juice or sliced tomato, hot rolls and buttered, ice cream. "Party Turkey Casserole" is a wonderful idea to meet your family will enjoy, too.

All-Weather Coat Provides Protection Against Elements

When shopping for a raincoat or an all-weather coat, you may have asked for a waterproof garment, when you really wanted one that was water-repellent. What's the difference?

In addition to standard finishes, waterproof and water-repellent - severe - new processes have been developed which are said to improve upon both. One new waterproof finish allows a garment to "breathe" for comfort. Applied to a variety of wash-wear cotton poplin, it never needs re-pressing.

Another is an improved water-repellent silicone finish. It's a water-repellent finish, as most coats are, but it also repels moisture. Such a garment gives adequate protection in an average rainfall, and sheds water even after repeated washings and dry cleanings. The porous cotton fabric so treated still "breathes", keeping you comfortable when the weather turns.

For best protection, choose an all-weather coat made of cotton wool poplin or cotton sateen. These fabrics have tighter weaves which absorb more of the water-repellent finish. In addition to standard finishes, waterproof and water-repellent - severe - new processes have been developed which are said to improve upon both.

Often at Thanksgiving time, the heart looks back with nostalgia to days gone by. Old friends lost in the rush of years. Perhaps loved ones have passed on so the circle around the table is not complete. The heart looks backward to blessings. But there is a danger in looking back to blessings if it prevents the heart from expanding to embrace new blessings and opportunities for service.

MARY HAWORTH Puzzled Readers Pose Problems Of Etiquette

Dear Mary Hawthorth: I visited the home of my father (my mother is dead) in another town this summer. My married couple and her family live there, as do her parents.

Sylvia knew exactly when I was to arrive and how long I would stay. After several days I heard through her mother that she was waiting for me to call her. I had been waiting for her to call me, as I felt this was the proper thing, inasmuch as I was the visitor from afar and asking to know my way.

On your side, that would mean as soon as you had run the gamut of the welcome, you would get your bags unpacked and otherwise transacted the usual preliminaries of settling in, or from you to Sylvia, as soon after your arrival as was convenient.

On Sylvia's side, if her heart were right, she might have left a message with your dad in advance of your arrival, asking you to be sure to let her know the minute you arrived. Then, if she had heard by 4:30 p.m., whereas you were due in town at 12 noon, she might have called again to check your whereabouts and plans.

Festival Of Thanksgiving Observed With Gratitude

Once more in the turn of the months, the year stops-pauses to observe the Thanksgiving season. We would say that Thanksgiving here there is no one who has reached the years of understanding, who is now becoming gratefully aware of the blessings they have, from Providence, received, and that they are, from the depths of hearts, they will thank days.

The Thanksgiving Day was instituted by folks come to a stern—a rockbound coast"—pioneers in a new and strange land. It is a day of thanksgiving to the One, the Holy, freighted homeward by the seas.

Most of all, we thank Thee, Lord, for dreams: The noble visions of high endeavour, the bright glories of the Grail that illumine the way.

Across the upward reaches of the skies, And as they stir the wings of the crumbling cloud, Into communion, Lord, with Thee— Good night — — — Diary

Friends met at Billie Hall recently for a Thanksgiving dinner. The occasion was a special one, as it was the first time that the former Priscilla Vill of Cambridge, Massachusetts, had returned to her home in Charlottetown.
