Bank Of Canada Interest Rate Drops To 5.85 Pc From 6.13

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada interest rate fell last week to 5.85 per cent from 6.13 last week with the sale of $100,000,000 in 90 - day government treasury bills.

The decline of .28 per cent followed three consecutive weekly increases in which the rate moved from 5.58 per cent on Aug. 27 to last week's 6.13.

The bank rate — minimum charge made on the infrequent central bank loans to chartered banks — is set at one-quarter of one per cent above the average yield on the weekly issue of short-term treasury bills sold by tenders. The bills are normally for 91 days, but this week's issue is 90 days to avoid having them mature Christmas Day.

Thursday bids were accepted for $100,000,000 of the bills with an average yield of 5.60 per cent compared with 5.88 last week. Average price was $98.638. Highest yield was 5.64 per cent and lowest 5.55.

182-DAY BILLS

Another $15,000,000 in 182 - day bills were sold at an average yield of 6.29 per cent compared with 6.58 last week. Average price was $96.959 compared with 96.825.

The Bank of Canada interest rate, being geared to the average interest yield on weekly government borrowings, is considered to reflect general conditions in the short - term money market. In recent days the price of short-term government bonds has strengthened.

Thursday's central bank interest rate of 5.85 per cent compares with the record high of 6.41 per cent last Aug. 13, and the record low of 1.12 per cent on Aug. 2, 1053.

The $115,000,000 in treasury bills sold this week equals the amount of 91-day bills falling due.

Thursday's announcement said that next week the government again will accept tenders for the same amount — $100,000,000 in 90-day bills and $15,000,000 in 182-day bills.

"So I thought I will give him a painting."

FROM SKETCHES

An accomplished painter, Mr. Lapenson used television close-ups of Mr. Khrushchev to make a series of sketches from which he did a full-blown oil-painting Thursday night.

The next day he packed the painting still wet, into his car and drove to Washington.

At the U.S. state department they advised him to try the Russian embassy.

He started speaking to the embassy officials in Russian and "their whole attitude changed. They like people who speak Russian."

He was told to check with the U.S. state department again to see if he would be allowed into Blair House to see Mrs. Khrushchev.

After state department approval "I went in with the painting and was presented right away to Mrs. Khrushchev."

LIKE QUEEN

"Mrs. Khrushchev has the grace of a queen," he said. "She is a simple woman and in her very simplicity she has dignity."

Mr. Lapenson said he told her that his son, Egil Oliver Lapenson, was born in Britain but that his passport had been taken away by the Russian government.

"She seemed very puzzled at this," he recalled. "She asked: 'Why was that done?' But I told her I didn't know.

"She said to me she agreed a son should be with his father. She said she will speak to her husband about me and will give him the painting."

He told her he has already obtained Canadian government permission to bring his son here, and has paid for an airline ticket from Riga, Latvian capital, to Montreal.

"I was so excited I was jumping up and down," he said. "She was very gracious. She wanted to make sure I had given her his correct name and address, so that the Russian government could check."

LEFT SON

Mr. Lapenson, 39, fled Latvia during the Second World War, but was obliged to leave his son behind. He is a British subject, born in London, but went to Latvia with his parents and was there when the war broke out. He is divorced from his first wife, has remarried, and has another son nine years old.

"Mrs. Khrushchev was very moved by my letter and the newspaper clippings," he said.
