Education in Ireland.

PROVISIONS OF THE NEW IRISH EDUCATION BILL.

A London despatch reports that Mr. Jackson, chief secretary for Ireland, has introduced the Irish education bill in the House of Commons. Mr. Jackson said he regretted the tendency to growth of denominational schools in Ireland. The school attendance in Ireland showed a steady growth, yet it was 20 per cent. behind the school attendance in England. For this state of affairs a remedy, which was a compulsory school system, was needed. The bill proposed to compel the attendance of children between the ages of six and fourteen years, to prohibit the employment of children under eleven years, and to make illegal the employment of children between the ages of eleven and fourteen unless their proficiency should be certified to.

The bill would apply immediately to towns governed by corporations or commissioners, and would be worked by local authorities to be hereafter created by the counties. It was not desirable to exact from children in rural districts the same number of attendances as would be exacted from children in towns. The sum of £90,000 due Ireland in the present financial year would be devoted to the teachers' pension fund, and £200,000 due in the ensuing year would be devoted to making schools free as far as possible, and increasing teacher's salaries. The bill proposed to form a capitation grant to make free all schools the fees of which do not exceed six shillings yearly per child He would like to abolish "school pence" above eight shillings, but that would prevent benefiting the teachers. The measure would benefit the poorer districts rather than the richer.

Mr. McCarthy said that his party would consider the bill fairly. He expressed regret that the claims of the Christian Brothers' schools had not been recognized Several other Irish members expressed similar sentiments.

WITH GLOVES ON.

The hands of the patient referred to below were so sore and offensive that he had to wear gloves continually to hide his hands, until he used

PHOSPHOLEINE

(Pronounced FOS-FO-LEEN),

when they became smooth and soft.

SCROFULA AND SALT RHEUM.

Dear Mr. Eagar,

I have much pleasure in giving you a record of the effect produced by the use of your PHOSPHOLEINE. The following cases have come under my particular attention while visiting the sick and poor: A case of Hereditary Scrofula.—The patient had tried most of the blood purifying remedies and Sarsaparillas in use, but for the past 19 years obtained no relief. After taking three bottles of your PHOSPHOLEINE his flesh became smooth and healthy, and he is now completely cured. A case of severe cough in the last stages of Consumption: The cough was eased, and the patient regained flesh and strength. This case is past curing, and the patient was pronounced so by physicians; but had she obtained of your medicine sooner, would no doubt have been cured. A case in which patient had given up the use of alcohol: The craving was cured, and the patient was regaining health and strength. A case of loss of flesh, great weakness, and indisposition for exertion of any kind, has been restored to health and strength by using your PHOSPHOLEINE. I have also recommended it to many who have been suffering from Dyspepsia, loss of strength and flesh, and in every case it has effected a cure. I have derived much benefit from the use of it myself. I remain yours, &c.,

E. C. NEWBERY.
