Opening Yesterday Of Nova Scotia Legislature

HALIFAX (CP)—Nova Scotia's newly elected legislature met for its first session Wednesday and the speech from the throne indicated Progressive Conservative Premier Stanfield plans to give its members a good deal of work to do.

The speech, read in a crowded assembly chamber by Lieutenant-Governor Alistair Fraser, forecast legislation aimed at stepping up the province's industrial development. It is expected to provide for a $10,000,000 industrial development organization financed partly by the government and partly by private, commercial and municipal funds.

Also forecast were amendments to the Nova Scotia Housing Commission act to enable the government to give the municipalities financial aid for new home construction and slum clearance.

Additional help for municipal bodies was announced in a plan to abolish the highway tax they pay the province.

The speech said the House will be asked to approve a tax on the premium income of insurance companies, hitherto collected by the federal government. Ratification of a new agreement with Ottawa providing larger grants to the province also will be asked.

The new government announced it will appoint a commission to study and recommend changes in the Workmen's Compensation Act, promised in its election platform.

This will raise to four the number of royal commissions recently set up. Others are investigating the Annapolis Valley apple industry, farm credit and the Nov. 1 Springhill mine disaster.

In the field of public works the government indicated it will push ahead with paving of all roads now ready or nearly ready for hard-surfacing and with replacement of obsolete bridges.

In the Halifax area construction of a new city exit at Fairview and a highway connection to the new Halifax international airport were forecast. The government also plans to join Ottawa in building a dam and roadway across the Annapolis River, a marshland reclamation project negotiated by the previous Liberal administration.

The premier's recent warning to municipalities to go slow on school construction was repeated in the speech. Municipal leaders were asked to restrict themselves to schools needed to cope with higher enrolment, deferring other construction.

The speech made passing mention of the controversial Gordon report. The government said it favors the report's suggestion of an investigation of Maritime transportation needs and will urge steps to improve the situation.

No immediate move to enter a national health insurance system was indicated. The government said only that it is continuing to study the federal plan.

A new conference of Atlantic provinces premiers in Halifax this spring was forecast.

SDU Debaters Leave Today For Ottawa

The debaters who will represent St. Dunstan's University in the Dominion Debating finals on Friday and Saturday leave this morning by train for Ottawa. Representing the college and the Maritimes will be Donald MacDougall of Bloomfield, P.E.I., and Leo Peddle of Corner Brook, Nfld.

Ian Gillies, president of the Maritime Intercollegiate debating league will accompany the team as substitute debater. As a member of the NFUS Debating Association executive, he will attend the annual meeting while in Ottawa.

St. Dunstan's won the right to represent the Maritimes by virtue of three successive victories in the regular M.I.D.L. competition and a Maritime playoff victory over the University of New Brunswick at the local College Gymnasium last Monday.

The subject for the Dominion finals is "Resolved that the Federal Government encourage American capital investment in Canada". Opponents and sides for St. Dunstan's will not be known until the debaters arrive in Ottawa.

Rev. F.L. Cass, moderator of the College Debating Society and coach of the team, will also accompany the debaters.

World Scientists Hope To Determine Shape Of The World

TORONTO CP — Columbus believed the world was round and thereby discovered America.

Scientists have been putting his theory to the test for nearly 900 years. They are no longer sure that the Genoese navigator was right.

But science hopes to nail down with finality the true shape of the earth at a mammoth assembly of brainpower later this year at Toronto.

It will be known as the 11th general assembly of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, a 50-country royal family of science whose complex investigations will range from a study of the earth (geophysics) to its waters (hydrology), more explosive moments (volcanology) and how to leave it (rocketry).

The congress will be a highlight of the International Geophysical Year which isn't a year but 18 months—July, 1957, to January, 1959—set aside for history's first all-embracing study of the earth and just about every conceivable related science, including oceanography, seismology and what's inside.

1,500 EXPERTS HERE

Fifteen hundred experts in these fields from countries such as Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain will convene here Sept. 3 and remain in a huddle until Sept. 14 by which time IGY will be 2 1/2 months along.

The men regarded as tops in 14 distinct fields of research will poke, figuratively, from pole to pole, from ocean floor—and below it—to outer space. They'll discuss what has been accomplished and what remains to be done to further man's knowledge of the aurora borealis (and the aurora australis, the "northern" lights they see in Australia and other southern hemisphere points), cosmic rays, meteors, the upper atmosphere, glaciers, oceans, gravity, magnetism, earth tremors, solar flares and sunspots.

A lot of these topics involve riddles unsolved since the beginning of time.

The countries sending delegates will split the $300,000,000 that IGY is expected to cost. But the sponsors figure the price is cheap for the international goodwill they believe will grow from prolonged cooperation on a study of the earth.

The assembly itself will dig into the age of the earth (now estimated at 4,500,000,000 years), how much the poles wander around (tropical areas, for one thing, don't stay put), whether the world is warming up, where cosmic rays come from, how to measure inter-continental distances by radar and man-made moons (earth satellites).

This last, the earth satellite program, is probably the most highly-publicized feature of IGY so far. The United States is currently building a satellite to be fired sometime in 1958.
