would fill volumes, the tide of life flows as vigorously as in Europe. There is as much labor, as much contention, as much ambition, as much crime, as much variety of careers, hopes, fears and hatreds. It is still possible to a moneyless Indian to be viceroy of a dynasty older than history, or finance minister of a new prince whose personal fortune in hard cash is double that of the late Emperor William, or abbot of a monastery richer than Glastonbury ever was, owner of an estate that covers a county,
head of a firm whose transactions may vie with those of the Barings or Bleichroder.

The Vastness of India.

For 80 years at least writers have endeavored to bring home to the outside world a knowledge of the vastness of India but so far as can be perceived have failed. The average man, says the Fortnightly Review, reads what they say, learns up their figures tries to understand their descriptions, but fails, for his labor, to realize what India is—a continent large as Europe west of the Vistula, and with 30,000,000 more people, fuller of ancient nations, of varieties of civilization, of armies, of nobilities, priest-hoods, organizations of every conceivable purpose, from the spreading of great religious down to systematic murder. There are twice as many Bengalese as there are Frenchmen; the Hindostans, properly so-called, outnumber the whites in the United States; the Maharrats would fill Spain, the people of the Punjab with Scinde, are double the population of Turkey, and I have named four of the more silent divisions.

Everything is on the same bewildering scale. The fighting peoples of India, whose males are as big as ourselves, as brave as ourselves, and more regardless of death than ourselves, number at least 120,000,000, even to Gibbon's calculation of the population of the Roman empire. There are 490,000 trained brown soldiers in native service of whom we hear perhaps once in ten years, and at least 2,000,000 men who think their proper profession is arms, who would live by arms if they could, and of whom we in England never hear a word. If the Prussian conscription were applied to India, we should, without counting reserves, or landwehr, or any force not summoned in time of peace, have 2,500,000 soldiers actually in barracks, with 800,000 recruits coming up every year—a force with which not only Asia, but the world might be subdued. There are tens of millions of prosperous peasants whose hoardings make of India the grand absorbent of the precious metals, tens of millions of peasants besides whose poverty fellows or Sicilians or Connaught men are rich; millions of the artisans, raising from the men who build palaces to the man who, nearly naked and without tools, do the humblest work of the potter.

Every occupation which exists in Europe exists also in India. The industry of the vast continent never ceases, for India, with a population in places packed beyond European precedent, imports nothing either to eat or drink, and but for the Europeans would import nothing whatever. She is sufficient to herself for everything save silver. Amid these varied masses, these 250,000,000, whose varied description would fill volumes, the tide of life flows as vigorously as in Europe. There is as much labor, as much contention, as much ambition, as much crime, as much variety of careers, hopes, fears and hatreds. It is still possible to a moneyless Indian to be viceroy of a dynasty older than history, or finance minister of a new prince whose personal fortune in hard cash is double that of the late Emperor William, or abbot of a monastery richer than Glastonbury ever was, owner of an estate that covers a county, head of a firm whose transactions may vie with those of the Barings or Bleichroder. One man, Jule Pershad by name, fed and transported the army which conquered the Punjab.

One Way to Pay a Debt.

When one of the early settlers of Gouldsboro, Me., bought his farm he had to leave a $200 mortgage on it. He paid the interest promptly for many years and raised a large family. One year, when the collector of interest came around, he found the farmer's wife rocking the cradle, in which slept the 22nd child. The collector jokingly told the woman if she would make the even two dozen, whenever that might occur, he would lift the mortgage and give them an unnumbered title to the place. The next year he was on hand promptly to collect the interest due, when, lo! in the same cradle lay a fine pair of twins, which made up the two dozen; and, of course, there was nothing to do but to free the proud parents from debt. A Lewiston bank teller got a raise in his salary in a similar way not long ago.—Lewiston Journal.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when the children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. (April 1 '88)

Mimic Warfare.

Mr. G. W. Smalley writes from London to the New York Press: The naval operations are beginning to arouse the British public. Now that the blockade has been broken, both at Beershaven and Loughswilly, the British posts are being carried, British seaports captured, and British commerce in danger. The fact that the capturing fleet is British this time only modifies the alarm. The point is that fleets of superior force have failed to seal up the fleets they were blockading. The argument is that they would equally fail in preventing the escape of French fleets in time of war. Greenock, Aberdeen, Hartlepool and a dozen other towns have fallen; London itself is supposed to be in peril. Meantime part of the pursuing fleet has arrived at Plymouth, and part is disabled. The manoeuvre by which Admiral Tryon broke the blockade is thought by naval experts extremely clever.

Breaches of Etiquette.

It is a breach of etiquette to stare round the room when you are making a call.

To remove the gloves when making a formal call.

To open the piano or touch it, if found open when waiting for your hostess to enter.

To go to the room of an invalid without invitation.

To talk about the room examining its appointments when waiting for your hostess.

To open or shut a door, raise or lower a curtain, or in any way alter the arrangement of a room in the house of which you are a caller.

To turn a chair so as to bring your back to someone seated near you.

To remain after you have discovered that your host or hostess is dressed to go out.

To preface your departure by remarking "Now I must go," or to insinuate that your hostess may be weary of you.

For a lady receiving several callers to engage in a tete-a-tete conversation with one.

To call upon a friend in reduced circumstances with any parade of wealth in equipage or dress.

Teach the Boys.

To be obedient.

To have patience.

To be temperate in all things.

To read books worth reading.

Never to cheat, smoke, drink or use profane language.

To keep themselves neat and clean.

To shun evil company and rough ways.

To take off their hats when they enter the house.

To be useful in the house as well as out of it.

Always to be employed in some useful way.

To be polite at all times and have a kind word for everybody.

To keep early hours and always be to punctual and industrious.

To get their lessons and obey the rules of school.

To avoid the contracting of loose habits, and strive to be manly always.

To be kind and courteous to each other in the school room and on the street.—Woman.

Novel Method of Collecting Bills.

A telegram to the New Orleans Times-Democrat relates that at Arthur, Texas, a few nights ago, "John Gho, who runs a saloon, instituted a new method of collecting debts, which places him, in the eyes of the law, in the attitude of a train robber or highwayman. A number of men who had been at work on a Red River bridge became indebted to him to the amount of $80. As the St. Louis train passed north they boarded it to leave. Gho also boarded it, accompanied by a shot-gun. At a tank two miles beyond the Texas line he started through to collect his bills. The first man paid without a murmur, while the others scattered to the woods with Gho in pursuit. He fired two or three shots, but none took effect. No arrests have been made.
