FREE TRADE.
One of the earliest uses of this phrase occurred on the opening of the Irish Parliament in 1777, when Hussey Brough moved the address to the King, in which was the following sentence: "It is not by temporary expedients, but by an extension of trade that Ireland can be ameliorated." Flood, who was seated in the Vice-Treasurer's place, said audibly: "Why not a free trade?" The amendment electrified the House; the words were adopted, and the motion was carried unanimously.

"GREAT EVENTS FROM LITTLE CAUSES SPRING."
"If the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter," said Pascal, in his epigrammatic and brilliant manner, "the condition of the world would have been different." The Mahomedans have a tradition, that when their prophet concealed himself in Mount Shur, his pursuers were deceived by a spider's web which covered the mouth of the cave. Luther might have been a lawyer, had his friend and companion escaped the thunder-storm at Erfurt. Scotland had wanted her stern reformer, if the appeal of the preacher had not started him in the Chapel of St. Andrew's Castle. And if Mr. Grenville had not carried, in 1764 his memorable resolution as to the expediency of charging "certain Stamp Duties" on the plantations in America, the western world might still have bowed to the British sceptre. Cowley might never have been a poet, if he had not found the Opie might have perished in mute obscurity, if he had not looked over the shoulder of his young companion, Mark Otes, while he was drawing a butterfly. Giotto, one of the early Florentine painters, might have continued a rude shepherd boy, if a sheep, drawn by him upon a stone, had not attracted the notice of Cimabue as he went that way. Cromwell was near being strangled in his cradle by a monkey; here was this wretched ape wielding in his paws the destinies of nations. Charles Wesley refuses to go with his wealthy namesake to Ireland; and the inheritance which would have been his, goes to build up the fortunes of a Wesley instead of a Wesley; and to this decision of a schoolboy (as Mr. Southey observes) Methodism may owe its existence, and England its military—and we trust we may add, its civil and political—glory.—Quarterly Review.

ORIGIN OF BRITANNIA.
At Lettington Castle, in East Lothian, is a full length portrait, by Lely, of Frances Theresa Stuart, Duchess of Lennox, the most admired beauty of the court of Charles II. It is stated by Grammont that the king caused this lady to be represented as the emblematical figure of Britannia on the coin of the realm. The portrait represented a tall woman, with that voluptuous fineness of feature and person which seems, perhaps from the taste of the painter, to characterize the beauties of this reign. She leans upon the base of a pillar, and has an aspect of the utmost sweetness. Her luxuriant hair falls upon her fair white shoulders and her half-seen bosom. She is magnificently attired in purple, and a profuse robe of green, falling away from her shoulders, comes round her limbs, and draws the purple garment nearer to her figure. Such is the reputed origin of our "Britannia;" but a figure not unlike that on English copper coins is to be met with in the large brass coins of Hadrian and Antoninus Pius.

SPANISH ETIQUETTE.
The etiquette, or rules to be observed in royal palaces, is necessary for keeping order at court. In Spain it was carried to such lengths as to make martyrs of their kings. There is an instance, at which, in spite of the fatal consequences it produced, one cannot refrain from smiling. Philip the Third was gravely seated by the fireside; the fire-maker of the court had kindled so great a quantity of wood, that the monarch was nearly suffocated with heat, and his grandeur would not suffer him to rise from the chair; the domestics could not presume to enter the apartment, because it was against the etiquette. At length the Marquis de Potat appeared, and the King ordered him to damp the fire; but he excused himself, alleging that he was forbidden by the etiquette to perform such a function, for which the Duke d' Usseada ought to be called upon, as it was his business. The Duke was gone out: the fire burnt fiercer; and the King endured it, rather than derogate from his dignity. But his blood was heated to such a degree that an erysipelas of the head appeared the next day, which, succeeded by a violent fever, carried him off in 1621 in the twenty-fourth year of his age.—Disraeli's Curiosities of Literature.

OF VICARS OF BRAY.
The Vicar of Bray, in Berkshire, was a Papist under the reign of Henry the Eighth, and a Protestant under Edward the Sixth; he was a Papist again under Mary, and once more became a Protestant in the reign of Elizabeth. When this scandal to the gown was reproached for his versatility of religious creeds, and taxed for being a turncoat and an inconstant change-ling, as Fuller expresses it, he replied, "Not so neither; for if I changed my religion, I am sure I kept true to my principle; which is to live and die the Vicar of Bray!" This vivacious and revered hero has given birth to a proverb peculiar to this country, "The Vicar of Bray will be Vicar of Bray still." But how has it happened that this vicar should be so notorious, and one in much higher rank, acting the same part, should have escaped notice? Dr. Kitchen, Bishop of Lindisfarne, from an idio-

abbot under Henry the Eighth, was made a busy Bishop; Protestant under Edward the Sixth, he returned to his old master under Mary; and at last took the oath of supremacy under Elizabeth, and finished as a parliament Protestant. A pun spread the odium of his name; for they said that he had always loved the Kitchen, better than the Church!—Disraeli's Curiosities of Literature.

ORIGIN OF "HURRAH."
The word is pure Slavonian, and is commonly heard, from the coasts of Dalmania to Behring's Straits, when any of the population living within these limits are called on to give proof of courage and valor. The origin of this word belongs to the primitive idea that every man that dies heroically for his country goes straight to heaven—Huruj ("to paradise"); and it is so that in the shock and ardor of battle the combatants utter that cry, as the Turks do that of "Allah!" each animating himself by the certitude of immediate recompense to forget earth, and to contemn death.

A Novel Ear Trumpet.

Here is a word for those afflicted with severe deafness. A lady of my acquaintance has been very deaf for several years, and has tried various ear trumpets with little benefit. She now has one so unique and useful that others I think will like to try, and be pleased with the result. It is simply a hollow roll of stiff pasteboard, such as pictures or architect's plans are sent through the mail in. It may be a yard long or of convenient length to reach from the mouth of the speaker to the ear of the listener, which is of course placed near the roll. Every one knows it is hard to talk to a deaf person, who also realizes it keenly and feels very sensitive about it too. They miss a good share of bright conversation, those little things that give variety and perhaps chase away some dull train of thought. If a caller comes she raises her voice to the highest pitch when it is not always necessary, says some very common-place remark twice without being asked. Then complains at the call she made, in the other house, that it is a great exertion to talk with Mrs. A.—really her left lung was sore and her voice hoarse as a crow! Now a call on the lady who uses this simplest of ear trumpets is a mutual delight. The lady is a fine conversationalist herself and both seated in an easy chair, the roll between them, an animated conversation is carried on in the usual tone of voice.

News Notes.

The statement that a famine in Egypt is feared, because of failure of crops, is officially declared to be untrue. The Nile is rising slowly and the crop will be equal to those of 1884.

The floods in Austria are increasing. Three-quarters of Trieste is submerged. Ten lives have been lost and great damage has been done to property. Soldiers are at work day and night building embankments.

It is reported that the cotton mills in Lancashire and other counties will commence running on short time on Monday, with the object of defeating the New York corner. The operatives generally are willing to assist the employers.

A Roman despatch reports: "Mgr. Schaffino has presented to the Vatican a memorandum on the eventuality of the Pope leaving Rome. He approves Belgium as a Papal residence, owing to its neutral and Catholic character, but he is not in favor of the selection of Belgium, except under a guarantee from the powers. He approves of the departure from Rome only in the event of a vigorous application of the penal code or war with France, when the Vatican will become an object of suspicion."

At the dinner given at the officers' club at Wilhelmshaven, on Thursday evening last, the Emperor of Germany in a speech returning thanks for the toast of his health, expressed his satisfaction at the manner in which the navy executed the manoeuvres. He dwelt upon the importance of the torpedo service, and said that although arduous it was the best school for young officers. He was convinced that the navy would soon be equal to the task of defending the coasts of the fatherland. The army and navy would always act in concert for its welfare.
