Federal Cabinet Debate May Be Stepped Up

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—Criticism by some provincial premiers of the federal government's medical care insurance proposal is expected to step up the intensity of the argument about the plan within the federal cabinet.

Until the recent premiers' meeting in Toronto, statements from the provincial capitals led Health Minister MacEachen and others to believe most provinces, some reluctantly, would be in the program by the target date for starting—July 1, 1967.

Only the Canadian Medical Association and Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta voiced any severe criticism of the federal offer to pay half the cost of provincial plans meeting four federal conditions.

Mr. Manning said the requirement that 90 per cent of a province's population be covered immediately would involve compulsion, to which he was opposed.

The CMA, although cool to the entire plan, concentrated its attention on whether doctors would be able to practise outside a government plan.

OPPOSED BY JOHNSON

The federal timetable appeared to be progressing without a hitch until the change in government in Quebec. The election of Daniel Johnson who opposes introduction of medical insurance right now, provided an ally for Premier John Robarts of Ontario, who has argued the same point.

Jean Lesage, former premier of Quebec, had been in favor of an early start and a powerful plus factor in the federal planning because this put one of the country's two largest provinces on Ottawa's side.

With Quebec in, Mr. Robarts and other premiers would have difficulty staying out—especially when the federal plan was to draw money for its share of the costs from the entire country and pay no money to provinces that were not in.

Now Mr. Johnson and Mr. Robarts are demanding their share of federal money to spend as they wish.

Federal informants say the government is unlikely to give way to this demand because it would take away Ottawa's lever to get the provinces to start a pre-paid medical insurance program.

But the demand by some premiers for delay and more consultat on bore a ring similar to the views of some federal ministers, when Mr. MacEachen last month tried to have his medical care bill pushed through the Commons before the summer recess.

He and members of the New Democratic Party felt delay would provide time for reluctant provinces and the CMA to mount opposition.

WANTED DELAY

Many in the cabinet wanted the bill held at first reading, permitting publication of the bill for study but lacking approval in principle on second reading.

Prime Minister Pearson worked a compromise between the two factions—take it through second reading and leave it to be studied until Parliament resumed in the fall.

A misunderstanding about the Commons pre-recess business list in the end resulted in George McIlraith, the government House leader, holding the bill at first reading.

Mr. Pearson has said the medical care insurance bill will be proceeded with soon after Parliament resumes Oct. 5.

Mr. MacEachen is understood to want it proceeded with immediately, which would man before the federal-provincial premiers conference scheduled for late October or early November.

Opposed to him will be those who want the bill held at least until the conference, and any who agree with those premiers who want it held back for a year or two.

Tourists Leave $105,900,000

ATHENS (AP)—A million tourists left $105,900,000 in Greece last year, the government reports. It plans to accommodate 2,000,000 persons annually within the next five years.

Premier Stephanos Stephanopoules is setting $21,600,000 aside this year for projects to attract tourists. A 10-year plan to spend $1,000,000,000 is being developed, with foreign financing expected.

Better boat service to Greece's 1,250 islands and new centres for international conventions are parts of the development plans.

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN

TOKYO (AP)—The Chinese Communist party has ordered 35,000,000 copies of selected writings of Mao Tse-tung distributed to the Chinese people "as their weapon to fight against those party members . . . who are taking the capitalist road." The official Peking People's Daily said the culture ministry had been ordered to print and distribute the works of Mao in large quantities and in various forms.

Military Chief Issues Warning

LAGOS (AP) — Nigeria has settled into an apprehensive calm after its second army mutiny in eight months. But the government-run newspaper Sunday Post hinted at the prospect of more trouble.

The chief of the new military regime, Lt.-Col. Yakubu Gowon, cautioned politicians on making statements that he said could jeopardize forthcoming talks to settle the tribal rivalries that have troubled the nation.

The military is still in control in Enugu, capital of the eastern region where an estimated 400 northern Hausa troops are keeping watch for any sign of trouble.

The army's presence in Enugu has caused an inflammable situation in the oil-rich eastern region which constitutes the main threat to Nigerian unity. The region wants to partition itself off from the nation's other three less developed regions.

The airports at Enugu and Port Harcourt are reported closed.

Lagos, where Gowon, 31, took over the supreme command from Maj. Gen. T. U. Aguiyi-Ironsi, was calm and military control in the federal capital appeared easing.

But Abeokuta in western Nigeria, one of the three main centres of the mutiny, was reported still patrolled by troops.

There have been no reports yet of talks between the eastern region and the Lagos regime.

Lagos officials hope that the logistical problems of secession—such as repatriation of sections of the population to their own tribal areas, government machinery and railway links—will prove so difficult that secession will be dropped in favor of a new form of federation.

The land-locked north has been threatening to secede from the federation since Nigeria gained independence from Britain in 1960.

HISTORY OF BLOODSHED

The country's three main tribal regions — the Ibo east, the Hausa north and Yoruba west—have a history of vicious rivalry which has often been punctuated with massacres and blood-baths.

Under British colonial rule, the regions were semi-autonomous. From 1960 until the mutiny, the civilian and military governments attempted to unify the country under a central government in Lagos.

The release of political prisoners has met favorable reaction, especially in the south.

Opening lead—king of hearts.

There is no simple rule that tells you when to win a trick or when to refuse it; it is always matter of using your best judgment, according to the particular circumstances with which you are faced.

For example, take this deal where West leads the king of hearts against three notrump. Obviously, you could take the king with the ace and then start to think of the best way of trying to make nine tricks, but this would no be an ideal way to approach the play of the hand.

Winning the trick with the ace would put you in a position where, if East ever got the lead, he would be able to play a heart through your J-7 and you would find yourself in serious trouble.

The proper thing to do is to let West win the opening lead with the king of hearts. This stops him from leading another heart, and it therefore takes some of the heat off the heart suit.

Let's say that West switches to a diamond at trick two. The temptation to finesse at this point is certainly strong, but, under the circumstances, it would be wrong to finesse.

The danger is that you might lose the trick to the king and be faced with a heart return, in which case you would eventually go down one if and when you attempted the spade-finesse.

The danger is that you might lose the trick to the king and be faced with a heart return, in which case you would eventually go down one if and when you attempted the spade finesse.

Instead, you should take the ace of diamonds at trick two and lead the jack of spades from dummy. You are not greatly concerned if you lose the finesse to West, because he can do you no injury with any return.

Thus, if he takes the king of spades and plays a diamond, your worries are over because you now have nine ice cold tricks. The same result accures if he makes any other return.
