The bidding:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 4♠ Pass

plays the ace and another diamond, ruffing in dummy. He then enters his hand with a trump and ruffs another diamond. Next he cashes the king of clubs and this is then the situation:

West	North	East
♠ J 8 4	♠ Q 9 8	♠ K 10 9 7 5 2
♥ Q 9 5 2	♥ Q 6	♥ K 10 6 4 3
♦ J 10 9 8 6 3	♦ 7	♦ Q
♣ Q	♣ K 7 5	♣ A 4 2

The crucial decision is at hand. The question is who has the king of hearts.

If declarer thinks West has the king, he should lead a club to force West to lead a heart or give South a ruff and discard.

If declarer thinks East has the king, he should lead the ace and another heart to compel a ruff and discard.

South cannot be certain who has the king, but he should assume East has it. Since West is known to have started with six clubs and at least three diamonds, he cannot have more than four hearts. East therefore has at least five hearts and is consequently more likely to have the king.

So the ace and another heart are played and East must return a red card, thus allowing declarer to discard a club loser.

Po outlined the progress of the economy in 1957 and its expectations for this year. He painted a rosy future for China's industry.

"The basic tasks and major targets laid down in China's first five-year plan have been fulfilled or over-fulfilled in every respect," he said.

"The first five-year plan ended last December and a new five-year plan started in January. Po's report gave no details of the long-term targets of the new plan.

Po estimated the value of industrial output in 1957 at about 63,000,000,000 yuan (about $25,000,000,000). This was 4.1 per cent over the target, 6.9 per cent over the 1956 total and 17.3 per cent over the annual figure envisaged under the original five-year plan.

For 1958, Chinese economists forecast total industrial output at about 72,000,000,000 yuan (about $29,000,000,000), an increase of 14.6 per cent over 1957, he said.

The vice-premier said production of grain reached 185,000,000 tons last year, an increase of 2,500,000 tons. This was the smallest increase for any year of the first five-year plan and was far short of the 191,000,000-ton target set last June.

The goal of 196,000,000 tons set for this year was lower than the 1956 target of 199,450,000 tons—a quota Chinese farmers could not approach in a year of severe floods. The lower goal indicates that Chinese rulers do not expect to solve the problem of keeping food production in step with rising population for many years yet.

Little Hope Of More Pie For Chinese

PEIPING (Reuters) — An economic planner held little hope Monday the Chinese people will get a bigger slice of China's economic pie in the next few years.

Vice-Premier Po I Po, chairman of the national economic commission, called for better standards of living in his economic report to the National People's Congress. The Congress, China's legislature, convened Saturday for a session of two to
