THE VICE-REGAL VISIT

Warships Coming to Ch'town.

WILL ARRIVE THIS EVENING AT 6 O'CLOCK.

Earl and Countess of Aberdeen on Board.

SHORT SKETCHES OF THE GORDONS AND THEIR EXCELLENCIES.

Events of To-Morrow and Saturday.

The town is gay with bunting in honor of the visit of Lord and Lady Aberdeen, who are due here this evening about six o'clock, in the flagship Blake. Many of the principal stores have their show windows beautifully decorated and ornamented with portraits of the distinguished visitors. The arches at the City Building and the Railway, are about completed, and all is ready for the guests.

A Noble Ancestry.

The Earl of Aberdeen is the heir of a long and distinguished line of British noblemen. The first Gordon of whom there is now any distinct trace is Richard of Gordon, said to be the grandson of the famous knight who slew some monstrous animal in the Merse in the time of Malcolm III. That Richard was Lord of the Barony of Gordon, in the Merse, is undoubted, as between 1150 and 1160 he granted from that estate a piece of land to the monks of St. Mary at Kelso, a grant confirmed by his son Thomas. Other Gordons figure in history about this time, apart from Bertram de Gordon, whose arrow in 1199 fatally wounded Richard the Lion-hearted of England at Chalons. Alicia IV. of the Gordon family, an heiress, married her cousin, Adam Gordon, who was a soldier among the thousand auxiliaries whom Alexander III. sent with Louis of France to Palestine, where he was slain. From his grandson, Sir Adam, all the Gordons in Scotland and Canada are descended. The first appearance made by Sir Adam in history was at the recapture of the castle of Wigton, of which he was subsequently made governor. For his many faithful services, Robert I., on the forfeiture of David, Earl of Athol, gave him a charter of the lands of Strathbogie. He was killed at Hallidin Hill; but his son, Sir Alexander, escaped the slaughter, and was the first designed of Huntley. Another Sir Adam Gordon, in descent tenth of Gordon and Huntley, whose father was slain at Otterburn, lost his life fighting for his country at the battle of Homildon in 1402, leaving only a daughter, who married a second son of Seton of that Ilk. Their eldest, son Alexander, was in 1449 created Earl of Huntley in consequence of his great public services to James I. and James II. To trace all the great actions and deeds of the warlike line of Huntley would far exceed our space. Alexander, the third Earl, fell at Flodden; George, fourth Earl, was General of the forces on the Borders to oppose those of Henry VIII. under Norfolk, with whom he had many victorious encounters; but in an attempt to get the Queen out of the hands of the Earl of Moray, he was attacked by the McKenzies, Munroes, Frasers and Mackintoshes, at Corrichie, where he was slain in 1562. George, the sixth Earl of Huntly, whose father had been High Chancellor, with other Catholic nobles, was suspected of having a secret correspondence with the Spaniards and troops were sent against them by James VI. in 1594. The latter was defeated; but Huntly was pardoned, appointed Lieutenant of the North and created a Marquis in 1599. George, the second Marquis, was Captain of the Scottish Guard of Louis XIII., and was so strongly attached to the cause of Charles I., that he was forfeited by the Scottish Parliament in 1645 and his property seized. He lost his head for his loyalty at Edinburgh in 1649. Four years previously his eldest son perished in the royal cause at the battle of Alford. George, fourth marquis, was created a duke, and his noble defence of the Castle of Edinburgh for James VII. is a stirring event in Scottish history. On the death of George fifth Duke, in 1836, the title became extinct, but the marquisate of Huntley went to the Earl of Aboyne, lineally descended from George, fourth son of George, second Marquis of Huntley, who was raised to the peerage of Aboyne by Charles II. for his many loyal services. The fighting force of the clan, when in arms for King James in 1715, is given by General Wade at a thousand claymores. The Earls of Aberdeen, so created in 1682, are descended from Patrick Gordon, of Methlic (cousin of the Earl of Huntley, who fell at the battle of Arbroath in 1445. Sir. George Gordon, of Huddo, Lord High Chancellor of Scotland, was elevated to the peerage and made first Earl of Aberdeen, and has been succeeded by many distinguished statesmen and soldiers.

Our Distinguished Guests.

The Governor General of Canada is the grandson of the Earl of Aberdeen, who was Prime Minister in 1854, and under whose premiership Mr. Gladstone served his first term as Chancellor of the Exchequer. He succeeded to the Scotch peerage January 27, 1870, on the death of his adventurous and ill-fated brother George, the sixth earl, who, on January 23, sailed from Boston in the capacity of mate of the schooner Hera, bound for Melbourne, and was swept overboard in a storm and drowned on the fourth day out.

He was educated at University college, Oxford, of which he took the degree of B. A. in 1871, and that of A. M. in 1877. In 1881 he was appointed Lord High Commissioner of the Queen to attend the sessions of the General assembly of the Church of Scotland. For five successive years he annually took up his residence for a fortnight in Holyrood palace, Edinburgh, where he entertained royally and from whence he issued with dignity to preside over the deliberatione of the governing body of the presbyterian church. He entered the House of Lords as a conservative, but in the session of 1876 he disagreed with some of the principal measures of his party, and when two years later the Earls of Derby and Carnarvon resigned their offices Lord Aberdeen heartily supported the views of these statesmen. In the debate on the Afghan war he voted against the Government of Lord Beaconsfield. In 1875 he was a member and subsequently became chairman, of the royal commission to enquire into the subject of railway accidents. During 1877-78 he served as a member of the committee of the House of Lords on intemperance. Having become a recognized member of the Liberal party, he was in 1880 appointed Lord Lieutenant of Aberdeenshire. In 1886 he was appointed by Mr. Gladstone Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, with the mission of carrying out the home rule policy of the Government. In this capacity he rendered himself immensly popular in Ireland, and the scene in Dublin on the occasion of his leave-taking is said to have been such as had never been witnessed there since the departure of Lord Fitzwilliam in 1795.

Lord Aberdeen is a member of many religious and philanthropic societies.

He is probably the most popular nobleman in Scotland, if not in Great Britain.

The Countess of Aberdeen is widely known not only as the wife of the Governor General, but as a leader in philanthrophic movements for the advancement and elevation of women.

A Poet's Greeting.

My noble Lord, on this glad day
When music's sweetest strain
And, cannons, with their fiery tongues,
Your presence here proclaim,
Swift through our Isle the tidings floats:
Lord Aberdeen's at hand!
And from ten thousand loyal throats
A welcome rings throughout the land.

"Cead Mille Failthe!" Noble Lord,
Simple our words of greeting; few,
But rich their worth, when forth they spring
From hearts that's leal and true,
Which bid us speak them yet once more
As ne'er they've spoken been.
Cead mille failthe, ten times o'er,
Loved Countess Aberdeen.

Fair Isle, that bears the noble name
Of the illustrious sire
Of her who links, with love-wrought chain,
You to her vast Empire,
'Tis meet thy sons, e'er leal and true,
Honor the mother Queen
In him who bears her love to you,—
The trusty Aberdeen.

And if, my Lord, our gracious Queen
Should ask you to convey
The things which you have heard and seen
In Edward's Isle to-day,
Say 'tis a land surpassing fair,
Blessed with a fertile soil,
Won from the fox and shaggy bear
By thrift and honest toil.

Her fields are clothed in richest hue,
Or nod with golden grain.
And every scene enchants the view
On meadow, hill and plain,
The groves peal forth a merry tune,
Her waters and bright streams
With Heaven's bounteous boon
In rich abundance teems.

Within her bounds none cry for bread,
For Wealth her gains with Labor shares;
Hence, we've no bombs to crush the head
Of grinding millionaires.
Here Peace and Plenty jointly reign,
And sweet content, well blended three.
All these have won her titled name—
"Fair Garden of the Sea."

And say this land is peopled by
A sturdy, hardy race,
In whom the keen, observant eye,
The lusty Celtic blood can trace;
And warm the veins it courses through
When's spoke Victoria's name,—
No hearts to-day more leal and true
In all her wide domain.

Here stands the sturdy Englishman,
Strong arms and ruddy face;
There the proud Scot, e'er in the van
In council, field or chase;
And Erin's pride stands closely by,
As oft in camp and field,
Ready to conquer or to die,
But ne'er to foeman yield.

What throne need fear war's loud alarms
Or foemen's envious arts,
Safe guarded by such brave, strong arms,
Deep-rooted in such loyal hearts?
Long may the Thistle, Shamrock, Rose,
Harmoniously blend
Triumphant o'er Victoria's foes,
And Britain's throne defend.

Fair Irish lips would kiss thy hand,
Most grateful for thy noble plea
For justice for that dear old land
That pines beyond the sea.
Soon may Right conquer Bigotry
And Prejudice lie tombed low down,
And Erin rise unfettered, free,
The fairest gem in Britain's crown.

What child of Erin does not owe
A debt of love, Countess, to you
Who deigned the world to teach and show
What Irish brains and hands can do?
And for the thoughtful, queenly deed
A million prayers ascend
For her who, in the hour of need,
Stood forth their noble friend.

My Lord, in honoring honest toil
You true nobility have shown;
And, be assured, in fruitful soil
The kindly seeds are sown;
Labor will feel an honest pride,
Nor blush in homespun to be seen,
With such a patron, friend and guide
As noble Aberdeen.

To still all grievances we'd fain
In these most happy hours;
But there's one link short in the chain
That binds this "Canada of ours."
And safe beneath our strait it lies—
Such is Sir Douglass' opinion;
Not found I fear, 'twill jeopardize
The honor of Dominion.

If taxes are a gift of Jove,
Abundantly they've come;
But wise men wrangle much to prove
Whether from good or ill they sprung.
But Grit and Tory all agree
Our state requires a tonic;
A tunnel's the one panacea
To right things economic.

Too long, I fear, I have detained
My Lord and Lady's ear;
Yet, hard it is to be constrained
To part with those our hearts hold dear;
But, though our lips the farewell speak,
Our hearts will keep your memories green,
While we'll e'er pray, God bless and keep
Good Lord and Lady Aberdeen.

SUPREME COURT.

Power's Release Unanimously Refused.

THURSDAY, Aug. 9.

The Supreme Court met to-day for the purpose of hearing the renewed application of John F. Powers, for his discharge from Queen's County jail. All three judges were present. It will be remembered that some time ago the court refused a similar application, but gave leave to Power to apply again and produce evidence from Boston as to the value of the furniture there. This evidence was forthcoming to-day before a special sitting of the court. Mr. Davies, Q. C., for Powers, produced an affidavit from a lawyer in Boston that the household furniture was worth $250 and was subject to a bill of sale for $150 given on the 22nd March, 1894. Mr. Stewart, Q. C., on behalf of the detaining creditors, produced a joint affidavit of a constable and of a general appraiser in Boston, who gave a detailed list of the furniture, &c., in defendant's premises in Boston, which both swore was worth at least $900. Specific values were placed opposite each article. Mr. Davies admitted that the evidence of value given by the detaining creditors was more satisfactory than that produced by Powers, but argued that as the proper y was beyond his reach or control, he should be discharged. Mr. Stewart was not called on to reply. The Chief Justice said the relief must be refused. The Master of the Rolls concurred. The Vice Chancellor said that on the former application he had been inclined to allow Powers out, but after the evidence given to-day he could not consent to his discharge. The property was in Boston, and there was the fact that a bill of sale had been given late in March by Powers and his wife just before leaving for Charlottetown. He, however, put his decision on the ground that Powers had property under his control which should be applied towards payment of the debts. He therefore concurred with the Chief Justice and the Master of the Rolls in refusing to discharge Powers from jail.

In the matter of the application of Douglas McNeill, for a writ of certiorari to remove a conviction under the Canada Temperance Act, had before the Stipendiary Magistrate of Summerside, Mr. Stewart, Q. C., on affidavits, obtained a rule nisi for certiorari upon the ground that the defendant had not been served with a summons in the first instance.

PROVINCIAL DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Dairymen's Association is being held today in the Market Hall, the president, Hon. Alexander Laird, in the chair. Prof. Robertson, ex-Governor Hoard, and Mr. McPherson are among those present. At the meeting held this morning a committee of five was appointed to prepare an address of welcome to the Governor General. The feature of this afternoon's session is a speech by ex-Governor Hoard.

Either by acquired taint or heredity, those old foes Scrofula and consumption, must be faced generation after generation; but you may meet them with the odds in your favor by the help of Scott's Emulsion.

The Horse Wonder, Edison,

is the longest and heaviest foretopped, maned and tailed Horse living to-day in the world, and is considered one of the greatest freaks of nature in the animal kingdom. His abnormal growth of hair is a burden to him, and is constantly growing at the rate of two inches per month. He was one of the leading attractions for nine months at the World's Fair, Chicago, where hundreds of thousands of ladies, gentlemen and children saw and admired him. He has been a greater sensation in the equine family than all the trotting and running horses of the age. No one should fail to see this extraordinary animal on this occasion, as you may never have another opportunity of seeing this greatest of all wonders, as he will only be here for a short time. Edison, the greatest electrician of the present age, is considered a wonder among men, but he is nowhere as compared with his namesake EDISON, of the equine family. All should see Edison at the Tent, Charlottetown Market Square, Afternoon and Evening, August 9th and 10th. Georgetown, August 11th. Ten cents admits you.
