FOUL PLAY.

CHAPTER XV.

Wylie seemed in no hurry to enter upon the required subject. Said he evasively:

"Why, gov'nor, it seems to me you are among the breakers here yourself."

"Nothing of the sort, if you have managed your work cleverly. Come; tell me all, before we are interrupted again."

"Tell ye all about it? Why, there's part on't I am afraid to think on, let alone talk about it."

"Spare me your scruples, and give me your facts," said Wardlaw coldly. "First of all, did you succeed in shifting the bullion as agreed?"

The sailor appeared relieved by this question.

"Oh, that is all right," said he, "I got the bullion safe aboard the 'Shannon,' marked for lead."

"And the lead on board the 'Proserpine.'
'Aye, shipped as bullion.'"

"Without suspicion?"

"Not quite."

"Great Heaven! Who?"

"One clerk at the shipping agent's scented something queer, I think. James Seaton.
That was the name he used by!"

"Could he prove anything?"

"Nothing. He knew nothing for certain and what he guessed won't never be known in England now."

And Wylie fidgetted in his chair.

Notwithstanding this assurance, Wardlaw looked grave, and took a note of the clerk's name.

"Give me all the details," said he. "Leave me to judge their relative value. You scuttled the ship?"

"Don't say that! Don't say that!" cried Wylie, in a low but eager voice. "Stone walls have ears." Then, rather more loudly than was necessary: "Ship sprung a leak that neither the captain, nor I, nor anybody could find, to stop. Me, and my men, we all think her seams opened with stress of weather." Then, lowering his voice again: "Try and see it as we do; and don't you ever use such a word as that what come out of your lips just now. We pumped her hard; but it warn't no use.
She filled, and we had to take to the boats."

"Stop a moment. Was there any suspicion excited?"

"Not among the crew; and, suppose there was, I could talk 'em all over or buy 'em all over, what few of 'em's left. I've got 'em all with me in one house, and they are all square, don't you fear."

"Well, but you said 'among the crew!' Whom else can we have to fear?"

"Why, nobody. To be sure one of the passengers was done on me; but what does that matter now?"

"It matters greatly—it matters terribly!
Who was this passenger?"

"He called himself the Rev. John Hazel.
He suspected something or other, and what with listening here, and watching there, he judged the ship was never to see England, and I always fancied he told the lady."

"What! was there a lady there?"

"Aye, worse luck, sir—and a pretty girl she was, coming back to England to die of consumption, so our surgeon told me."

"Well, never mind her. The clergyman?
This fills me with anxiety. A clerk suspecting us at Sydney, and a passenger suspecting us in the vessel. There are two witnesses against us already."

"No—only one."

"How do you make that out?"

"Why, White's clerk and the parson, they was one man."

Wardlaw stared in utter amazement.

"Don't you believe me?" said Wylie, "I tell ye that there clerk boarded us under an alias. He had shaved off his beard; but bless my heart, I knew him, directly."

"He came to verify his suspicions," suggested Wardlaw, in a faint voice.

"Not he. He came for love of the sick girl and nothing else; and you'll never see either him or her, if that is any comfort to you."

"Be good enough to conceal nothing.
Facts must be faced."

"That is too true, sir. Well, we abandoned her and took to the boats. I commanded one."

"And Hudson the other?"

"Hudson! No."

"Why, how was that? And what has become of him?"

"What has become of Hudson?" said Wylie, with a start. "There's a question!
And not a drop to wet my lips and warm my heart. Is this a tale to tell dry? Can't ye spare a drop of brandy to a poor devil that has earned ye £150,000, and risked his life and wrecked his soul to do it?"

Wardlaw cast a glance of contempt on him, but got up and speedily put a bottle of water on the table before him.

Who can suspect Hudson in the teeth of such a fact? Now pray go on, my good Wylie, the boats!"

"Well, sir, I had the surgeon, and ten men, and the lady's maid, on board the long-boat; and there was the parson, the sick lady, and five sailors aboard the cutter.
We sailed together till night, steering for Juan Fernandez; then a fog came on and we lost sight of the cutter, and I altered my mind and judged it best to beat to ward, and get into the track of the ships. Which we did, and were nearly swamped in a sonwester; but by good luck, a Yankee whaler picked us up, and took us to Buenos Ayres, where we shipped for England, which was left of us, only four besides myself; but I got the signatures of the square to a tale of the wreck. It is all as square as a die, I tell you."

"Well done. Well done. But stop! the other boat with the sham parson on board, who knows all! She will be picked up, too perhaps."

"There is no chance for that. She was out of the tracks of trade; and I'll tell ye truth, sir. He poured out a half a tumbler of brandy, and drank a part of it; and now for the first time his hand trembled as he lifted the glass. 'Some fool had put the main of her provisions aboard; the long boat; that is what sticks to me, and won't let me sleep. We took a chance, but we didn't give one. I think I told you there was a woman aboard the cutter,' that sick girl, sir. Oh, but it was hard lines for her, poor thing. I see her pale and calm; oh, Lord, so pale and calm; every night of my life; she knelt aboard the cutter with her white hands clasped together, praying."

"Certainly, it is all very shocking," said Wardlaw; "but then you know; if they had escaped, they would have exposed us. Believe me, it is all for the best."

Wylie looked at him with wonder.

"Aye," said he, "after staring at him in wonder; 'you can sit here at your ease, and doom a ship, and risk her people's lives, but if you had to do it, and see it, and then lie awake thinking of it, you'd wish all the gold on earth had been in hell before you put your hand to such a piece of work.'"

"In short, said he, 'ghostly smile. I wouldn't smile a haughty man to take the three thousand pounds I pay you for this little job.'"

"Oh, yes, I do; but for all the gold in Victoria I wouldn't do such a job again.
And you mark my words, sir, we shall get the money, and nobody will ever be the wiser." Wardlaw rubbed his hands complacently; his egotism, coupled with his want of imagination, nearly blinded him to everything but the pecuniary feature of the business. "But," continued Wylie, "we shall never thrive on it. We have snuk a good ship, and we have as good as murdered a poor dying girl."

"Hold your tongue, you fool!" cried Wardlaw, losing his sang froid in a moment, for he heard somebody at the door.

It opened, and there stood a military
ton.
