Secret Arctic Project Is Revealed By Ottawa

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Published results of a secret 1963-64 project in the Canadian Arctic extending to the North Pole show that it is possible to conduct day-and-night, year - round reconnaissance of the North.

The Defence Research Board, RCAF, transport department, U.S. Army and the University of Michigan co-operated in project Bold Survey and the results have just been published in a huge 819-page report by the university.

The main conclusion: "The ability to obtain an interpretable picture of the sea ice during total darkness now makes it possible to conduct sea ice reconnaissance the year round."

The "picture" was obtained by infrared (heat) sensors carried in an RCAF Argus patrol plane which covered a segment of the Arctic Ocean up to the North Pole.

Trevor Harwood, chief of the geophysical research section of the Defence Research Board who participated in the project, said in an interview that the results don't apply merely to sea ice.

For instance, a path tramped down in the snow at Alert on northern Ellesmere Island showed up clearly on the infrared film, which looks somewhat like the negative of a standard photograph.

This means, Mr. Harwood said, that it is possible to detect any human activity or disturbance on a snow-covered surface such as the wheel or ski marks of an aircraft.

The survey also covered part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and some lakes in southern Canada.

Meanwhile, Dr. Geoffrey Hattersley-Smith, Defence Research Board glaciologist and Arctic jack-of-all trades, is preparing to lead his 11th expedition into northern Ellesmere.

Mr. Harwood said scientists now have a pretty clear picture of the whole environment of northern Ellesmere, Canada's most northern territory.

"Our work is almost routine after 10 years and now we will be able to do more complex things."

Red Shield Appeal Seeks $4,814,706

TORONTO (CP)—The Salvation Army's 1965 Red Shield appeal in Canada will have a record objective of $4,814,706, Hon. Leslie Frost, chairman of the army's national advisory board, announced here.

The former Ontario premier said the board is confident the amount will be oversubscribed in the army's centennial year. The campaign will take place from May 1-31 in more than 600 communities and with thousands of volunteer workers assisting.

Part of the money will be used for centennial projects, some of them not yet planned in detail, and for extensions to hospitals, alcoholics' centres and homes for unwed mothers, the aged, and delinquent boys.

"This is one army we must not disarm," Mr. Frost said, "but give more money and more support to its many activities in the second century of its operation."

Wide Changes Demanded In U.S. Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee has called for sweeping changes in the foreign aid program including a cut-off of assistance to Indonesia and the United Arab Republic.

It did so in a report recommending enactment of a two-year, $3,352,170,000 annual foreign aid bill to which it tied a two-year deadline for the administration to come up with a drastically revised program.

The committee considered recommending "an absolute prohibition" on aid to Indonesia and the U.A.R., the report said. Instead, it substituted an expression of Congress that all aid should be ended to any country following "officially incited or unrestrained mob action" against U.S. embassies and other properties.

BAN REPORTERS

PHNOM PENH (Reuters)—The government announced Friday it had forbidden the entry to Cambodia of all journalists, correspondents, photographers and cameramen from "the so-called free world." The ban, applied regardless of nationality, would include "free world" Asian journalists.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X B

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead—ten of hearts.

There are many play situations covered in the textbooks where declarer is advised to deal with a particular combination of cards in a certain specified manner.

One learns to deal with these combinations mechanically, whether the type of play involved is a certain kind of finesse or a certain kind of safety play.

The trouble with playing mechanically, however, is that too often what appears to be a stock situation sometimes turns out to be not so stock, and the slight variation from the standard setup changes the treatment that should be accorded it.

What this points up is that it is dangerous to follow rules blindly. Each hand should stand on its own feet and not rest on a generality.

In the deal shown, it is easy for declarer to go wrong if he relies solely on past experience. it seems perfectly natural to win the heart lead in dummy and play a low diamond and finesse the ten. When a heart is then returned and a diamond is played to the ace, declarer suddenly discovers that he must go down one.

The fact is that South can assure nine tricks regardless of how the opponents cards are distributed. Whether the diamonds are divided 3-0, 4-1, or 3-2, or where the king and queen reside, are matters of only minor concern.

Declarer starts with eight tricks and is looking for a ninth. Obviously, the best source is in diamonds. All that South has to do to assure the extra trick is to lead a diamond to the ace, forgoing the finesse.

He happens to catch the king in this deal and his worries are over. But in any hand that may exist he is bound to be successful. Regardless of what West plays, declarer continues with a low diamond towards the jack. If either opponent has the K-Q-x-x or the K-Q-x-x-x, the situation shows up and establishing another diamond trick takes care of itself. If the diamond honors are divided or the suit breaks 32, the task is that much easier.
