Bristol and Vicinity

Mr. John Perry was in the city recently on business.

Mrs. Bill Sanderson is out again after her serious illness.

Mrs. Flossie Hooper who had spent the past several winters in Boston, will reside in Charlottetown for this winter. She still retains her old home here.

It's only January but already the work of getting ready for the fishing season has started and some traps are already being built. Scores of trap heads are being knifed for the rigging.

The cold snap put a heavy coating of ice on the bay and small fishermen with their trucks are out on the ice but not very far off shore as the channel is still dangerous.

The people in the harbor district have turned to old dobbin for travelling as the roads are blocked with heavy snow. As they are all farmers the horse and sleigh is always in readiness and many of them like the snow to get their wood and lumber hauled out.

Friends of Mrs. W. C. MacDonald will regret to learn of her illness in the P. E. Island Hospital where she is a patient. Mrs. MacDonald hails from Peake's Station and never resided here, but she is well known here as her husband is a Bristol man. All wish Mrs. MacDonald a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Herb Kenny left here Friday morning for Hamilton, Ont., to be with her daughter, Mrs. Bernard Hughes who is in hospital in that city at present. While in that city she will visit another daughter Mrs. Eambrick and a son Kenny who resides there. She hopes to be home again early next month.

When Mr. Herb Kenny sold off most of his fat chickens, he picked out a dozen to fatten up for special occasions and penned them up in a building. One morning recently when he went out to feed the birds all he found was a pile of feathers. What happened to the chickens during the night is a mystery. Some think a fox ate them but it doesn't seem fair to think one fox could eat 12 seven-pound chickens in one feast. All the birds are gone, all except the feathers, with a hole in the top of the wire door of the coupe.

For the first time in 30 years mud will be dug on the bay this winter with the old fashioned digger with a one horse power driver.

Mr. Ambrose Phalen who has kept one of the old diggers for a quarter of a century and who knows where the beds are, will head the party for the digging season. Thirty to 40 years ago, scores of diggers and men were seen on the ice early and late. Quite a few of the old timers will take a long look at the old digger as it starts to work again. Mud digging was stopped years ago when the spuds were scabby. The scabs were blamed on the mud.

Historic Mission Of St. Cuthbert At St. Theresa's, Baldwin's Road

Four years after the emigration to Fort Augustus, Prince Edward Island, of a number of the parishioners of Father Moynagh, pastor of Donagh, Ireland, a man named James Trainor, agent for Father John MacDonald of Glenadale, went over to Ireland and collected, chiefly in County Monaghan, two shiploads of people, who sailed from Belfast in the "Connisbruck" and the "Agitator" early in the spring of 1839 and landed in Charlottetown in May of that year. Some of these people settled among their friends in Fort Augustus, some in Township Sixty-Five, others in Sparrow's Road, Montague, and Johnston's River.

Many who at first settled in Fort Augustus moved to the district known as Baldwin's Road, so called from the farm of a Tipperary man, named Thomas Baldwin, who was the first settler in the district. Here, a few years later, they were joined by Francis Curran, Patrick Bradley, Peter McQuaid, John McQuaid and Andrew Campbell, who came out from Ireland in 1841 in the "Margaret Pollock" and who, with many others, took up land on the Montgomery estate on Baldwin's Road which was then uncleared forest. These people who were all good Catholics, attended Mass in the parish of Vernon River until their own church was built.

The mission was at that time served by Father Brady, who decided upon building a church three miles to the north of St. Theresa's, in Peake's Road. He obtained a grant of sixty acres of land from the late Charles W. Morrel, Esq., and made preparations for building. The land was cleared and scantling prepared when there was a change of parochial administration, and Rev. James Aeneas McIntyre took charge of the parish. Father McIntyre thought the situation selected by Father Brady too far back in the woods, and purchased twelve acres of land from Mr. Campion, upon which the first church of the Baldwin's Road mission was built.

This church was placed under the invocation of St. Cuthbert. It was cruciform in shape and was built by a man named Barrett. The first presbytery of Baldwin's Road was built several years later than the church. Its erection was superintended by Rev. James Phelan.

In 1875, the church built by Father McIntyre was replaced by Rev. Angus MacDonald who was in charge of the mission. In 1879, during a violent snow storm accompanied by a strong north-west gale, this fine church was blown down, to the great distress of the worthy priest and all the parishioners. The following account of the catastrophe is taken from the parish register:

"On February 22nd, 1879, St. Cuthbert's church was blown down and completely destroyed, to our great loss and affliction. We had to consider then, as far as we could, what was to be done in order to get some place in which to assemble the people for Divine Service. We had no money, no church, and the parish was $1,500 in debt. We cannot forget the afflicted appearance of the church grounds and the parish generally on the day and week after the church was blown down.

The parishioners showed a good spirit and were willing to do the best they could, but what had they to work on, in regard to money or temporal or worldly matter? Nothing whatever. We had, however, our confidence in God which required strengthening, and our courage and earnestness, which also needed strength and improvement. We had to build up a temporary structure to answer the purpose of a church. Every man in the parish agreed to give eight days' work. We hired two or three men to superintend, and from the wreck of the fallen church we put up a plain, cheap building which answered the purpose of a church for six years.

St. Cuthberts was blown down in the first week of Lent; we had Mass in our new church on Palm Sunday."

A few years passed by; the parish, financially, was better off and the priest was willing to do the best they could, but what had they to work on, in regard to money or temporal or worldly matter? Nothing whatever. We had, however, our confidence in God which required strengthening, and our courage and earnestness, which also needed strength and improvement. We had to build up a temporary structure to answer the purpose of a church. Every man in the parish agreed to give eight days' work. We hired two or three men to superintend, and from the wreck of the fallen church we put up a plain, cheap building which answered the purpose of a church for six years.

The contract for building was let to John Kenny and Robert Curran, who built what was generally acknowledged to be a beautiful and substantial church. It measured eighty feet in length by forty in breadth. The nave which was clerestory was thirty two feet in height; the aisles were sixteen feet from base to buttress. The high altar, which was richly painted was made by Mr. Curran. There was a side altar to the Sacred Heart, and above it a beautiful picture of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, a gift from Bishop McIntyre to Father McMillan. This altar was kept decorated with exquisitely blooming natural flowers, and its whole appearance gave evidence of loving care and refined taste on the part of the sacristan. There were in the Sanctuary, statues of St. Joseph and the Blessed Virgin and two memorial windows bearing painted transparencies, one a picture of the Sacred Heart of our Lord, in memory of Mr. P. S. Mulligan; the other, a picture of the Angelic doctor, St. Thomas Aquinas, in memory of Hon. Robert and Mrs. Mooney.

"His social qualities, combined with his native talent, and his Present church of St. Cuthbert, built 1912

This one was furnished with galleries, which however, did not mar the appearance of the interior. The painting was chiefly in the shades of olive green, and there was here one of the finest sets of stations to be found in the diocese, and although obtained at a comparatively small cost, they were chosen and framed with a delicate and unerring taste.

The corner stone of this sanctuary was laid by his Lordship Bishop McIntyre who was assisted in the ceremony by very Rev. James McDonald, V.G., St. Andrews, Very Rev. Daniel McDonald, and Rev. James Phelan, Rev. William Phelan, Rev. John Corbett, and Rev. M. J. McMillan, pastor of the church.

On Sunday 29th August 1886, the church of Baldwin's Road was solemnly dedicated by Archbishop Lynch of Toronto. His Grace was assisted by Rev. Charles MacDonald, rector of St. Dunstan's College, Rev. James Phelan, Rev. John A. McDonald, Rev. Joseph McLean and Rev. M. J. McMillan, pastor. After the ceremony of dedication and the celebration of Mass, His Grace preached a sermon which was long remembered in those parts. In the afternoon His Grace blessed the stations, which were then erected, and again preached, after which the ceremonies were brought to a close by benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Some years after its first settlement by Irishmen, the number of the parishioners of Baldwin's Road was increased by the moving into the settlement of a number of MacDonalds of the family of Bornisne, who came from the vicinity of Plaquid River in St. Theresa's Parish. St. Theresa's had materially improved during the past few years end boasts numbers of as fine farms and orchards as can be found in the county. The old settlers, who by patient industry have achieved so much in their new homes always had loving recollections of their dear old land of their birth, and many a quaint story and odd reminiscence used to be told in the course of an evening's ceilighe in Baldwin's Road.

A familiar figure with some of those who emigrated from County Monaghan was James Trainor, Father John MacDonald's agent, whose grey coat and pants and "plaid vest" made by himself on his farm at Mill Cove, were long remembered. Then many are the tales of wrong and hardship from which these people fled. In the parish of Tyholland for instance, the tenants were obliged to pay two pound sterling an acre for their land, and ten shillings, county assessment, and although Catholics, they were obliged to give one tenth of every strike of grain towards the support of the English church Minister, and in some places there was an annual tax of five pence an acre on their farms, which money went to provide the Anglican Church with light.

The most prominent public man among the dwellers on Baldwin's Road was Hon. Robert Mooney, a native of the parish of Donagh, County Monaghan, who emigrated to this country in 1831 and first settled at Mill Cove.

The Charlottetown Herald of September 1, 1886, contained the following notice of Mr. Mooney's public career: "On the 5th ult, another old landmark was removed—Hon. Robert Mooney died at the residence of his son-in-law, Daniel Mullish priest of the Holy Trinity, Rev. J. W. McCordie, Chancellor of the Diocese was master of ceremonies and preached the sermon for the occasion. Sixteen priests from the Diocese attended the ordination. Father Corcoran celebrated his first solemn Mass on May 28th

James Phelan from 1868 to 1870, by Rev. Angus MacDonald from 1870 to 1876; by Rev. Charles McDonald from 1876 to 1878 and by Rev. M. J. McMillan from 1878 to 1896.

The new school had been built by the Sisters of St. Theresa Schola District and one of the classrooms had been in use for a couple of years. With the arrival of the Sisters of St. Martha, a second classroom had been furnished and was used for the first time. The pastor, Rev. J. B. Croken presided and welcomed His Excellency, the visiting clergy, representatives of the Department of Education and other invited guests. He referred to the events leading up to the building of the school and convent, and thanked the parishioners and former parishioners who had contributed so generously. He welcomed the Sisters of St. Martha, and expressed the hope that under their guidance a great development in the cultural and educational training of the pupils would be achieved.

Bishop Boyle complimented the Sisters and pupils on their excellent program. He emphasized the necessity of education, and pointed out how closely the spiritual and natural are connected and how it is necessary to have a good religious training. School inspector A. A. McCordie, C.S.A.R., all offered their congratulations and hoped that the children would appreciate and profit by the opportunities offered by the new school and convent.

Father Croken was ordained on June 26, 1927. As the twenty-fifth anniversary fell within the retreat week of the Diocesan clergy, the parishioners decided that the celebration should take place on that day, the jubilation celebrated Solemn High Mass in the parish church, assisted by two of his classmates, Rev. Patrick Rooney, pastor of Lacombe, Alberta, a deacon, and Rev. Dionel Buote, pastor of Nepper, Idaho, U.S.A., as sub-deacon. Rev. Phalen McMonaghan was master of ceremonies. The priests of the Deaneery were present in the sanctuary. The sermon for the occasion was preached by Rev. J. W. McCordie.
