"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the properties of well-selected Cacoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified by pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

MOON-FLOWER BELLE.

"Perfectly happy! Well, I am perfectly happy. I go where I will, I do as I will, and I have not a wish ungranted."

"Then, my dear, you have never been in love."

"No; that pleasure is yet to come."

"You think it will be a pleasure?"

"If the right man comes."

"It could not be a pleasure otherwise; but I see my uncle coming to claim me for a walk, so you will excuse me if I go to meet him."

"Certainly, my dear. Perfectly lovely, as well as perfectly happy," said the general's widow, as she turned again towards the group of ladies who had been listening to a discussion between herself and the most beautiful debutante of the season on the conditions of happiness.

"Yes," sighed a plain-looking little woman in an unbecoming brown gown, "it is easy to be happy, and even beautiful, in such costumes."

"But," interrupted the General's widow, "Miss Townsand is one of those women who would look well even in a shabby gray alpaca at high noon on a bright day. There would be a sweep to the skirt and a set to the waist that would be impossible to define or imitate. She is a born dresser, but I am wondering how long she will be able to declare herself perfectly happy."

"She does not know what happiness is, if, as she says, she has never been in love," chimed in a bride of three months, at which the little circle laughed, and the General's widow suggested that they move their seats to where they could have a better view of the main entrance, as it was time for the through train from the north to arrive, and it had been whispered that a Scotch Laird of high degree, an English Duke, and a well known journalist were expected—the Englishman to join the exploring party, the journalist to do the season for a syndicate, and the Scotch Laird—well, all sorts of rumors were afloat concerning him. One was that he dressed in kilts, and was followed by a Highlander in custume also.

"Did you ever see so many pretty girls?" said the General's widow, as she surveyed the merry crowd that filled the hallways, stairs, and main entrance of one of Florida's splendid hotels. "And Constance Townsand is quite the handsomest there."

And the General's widow was right. Tall and most divinely fair, in a gown of softest white silk, she reminded one of the royal moon flowers, a great bunch of which she held in her hand. They were her chosen flower, and by them she had become known as the moon-flower belle.

"That girl understands effects perfectly," thought the General's widow, as she watched her quietly and apparently without intention seat herself in an old-fashioned high-back chair that stood just at the foot of the stairway, and over which a graceful palm spread its dark green leaves.

There had been quite a discussion between the General's widow, the little lady in brown, and the bride as to how the Laird, the Duke, and the writer would act when they first saw Miss Towsand, for the three women had watched with a growing interest the sensations she never failed to produce, until they had begun to have a sense of proprietorship in the girl's radiant beauty, and would have bitterly resented any criticism the least bit unfavorable. That Miss Townsand deserved their admiration was certain, and that she never failed to be in the entrance hall when the evening coaches arrived, faultlessly gowned in white, and carrying her favorite flower, was also certain, so that the three women were sure on this particular evening of enjoying the little tableau they had mentally arranged.

The Englishman did just what the General's widow expected he would; he stopped in the very act of greeting a friend, readjusted his glasses, and after taking a good look, exclaimed:

"Stunning, do you know—stunning!"

The writer, the bride had declared, would run his hands through his raven locks—no auburn, no sunlight locks—call her a goddess, and end in writing verses to her. As it happened, he caught sight of her as he looked up from reading a telegram recalling him to other and less arduous duties than writing verses to the belle of the season would have been. And his locks were brown and cut short, he did not go through the running act, although it did take him a long time to read the telegram, as over it he watched the beautiful girl smiling and chatting to those about her. Then turning to the clerk at the desk, he asked:

"Who is the lady in white with the moon-flowers?"

"Miss Townsand of Texas, niece of Major Townsand, the richest cattle-man in the country. Been here two weeks; going to stay two more," answered the authority behind the desk, in a I-knew-you-would-ask-it tone of voice, never once raising his eyes from the book over which he was bending.

"Thank you, Mr. Cash; you would make a tip-top paragrapher."

"That's all right, old man; when you want an introduction to the Major, I will gladly arrange it for you."

As for the Scotch Laird, he did not appear, thereby disappointing the little lady in brown, who had been his champion from the first, declaring that he would be the one to woo and win.

"My dear, he and his kilts have been bribed into staying elsewhere as attractions," said the General's widow, who disliked Scotchmen.

"No such thing; he is probably so shy or late that he has come in by a side entrance. I am going to look at the register as soon as that telegraph-reader moves away."

But before she could carry out her intentions a young man in a plain brown travelling suit with a canvas bag in his hand stepped into the brilliantly lighted hallway, and was at once greeted by half a dozen people, among them Constance, who stood up on seeing him, the flowers she had been holding falling in sweet confusion at her feet.

Archey—why, Cousin Archey!"

"Con—why, Cousin Con!" he answered, as they clasped hands.

The bride smiled, and whispered something to the general's widow, who answered:

"Yes the right man has arrived."

"And it is," triumphantly announced the little lady in brown, "Laird Archibald Robin, of Robin Castle, Scotland."—Harper's Bazar.

Not New, After All.

The college phrase, "not in it," is not new, as many would suppose, but was used by Euripides, more than two thousand years ago, in his "Meleager," when he says: "Cowards do not count in battle; they are there, but not in it."

SURGEON'S KNIVES.

Failed to Remove the Disease from Hezekiah Vaughan's System—Dodd's Kidney Pills, which have Never yet Failed, Cured Him in Short Order.

SANDWICH, May 28.—Hezekiah Vaughan of the township of Gosfield, has lately gone through a severe surgical operation at Harper's hospital, Detroit, for what different doctors diagnosed as liver complaint kidney trouble and bladder complaint. Four sergons cut away at him for 4½ hours, but when they got through, none of them could tell what was wrong, and the patient was left as bad as ever. The benefits derived by a neighbor from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, induced Mr. Vaughan to try them. From the first he began to improve. His bowels soon became regular and the pains that afflicted him disappeared. Six boxes restored to his former vigor a man who had abandoned all hope of regaining sound health.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great Blood and Nerve Remedy.

"I FEEL 20 YEARS YOUNGER."

A Wonderful Cure in Hamilton.

Paine's Celery Compound Makes People Well and Strong.

MRS. JULIANNA SANDBERG

All classes of Canada's population—all sexes—all ages—daily sound the praises of Paine's Celery Compound, earth's grandest and most wonderful medical discovery.

Medical professors, and physicians generally, are amazed when they hear and see the almost miraculous cures wrough through the agency of Paine's Celery Compound.

"You cannot do better than use Paine's Celery Compound," is the honest advice of many of our best and ablest doctors, when men and women consult them regarding rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, kidney and liver troubles, dyspepsia and run-down systems.

When Paine's Celery Compound is faithfully used, pain racked and suffering mortals are never disappointed. The great medicine works surely and effectively; it banishes every trouble and leads to freshness of life, robustness of constition, and gives to those who use it perfect health for the full enjoyment of earth's blesings.

Mrs. Juliana Sandberg, 49 West Ave., North, Hamilton, Ont., writes as follows for the benefit of all suffering Canadians:

"I have to thank you for being instrumental in saving me from years of suffering and ill-health. About three months ago I had a severe attack of "Grippe," which left me with my limbs swelled up and hardly able to walk, and my constitution was very much impaired. A friend recommended me to try your world-renowned Paine's Celery Compound. I did so, and am now walking about as well as ever, the swelling having completely disappeared. My constitution is now in excellent condition, and I feel twenty years younger.

"I consider your medicine the greatest boon ever given to the country, and I shall tell everyone the great good it has done me. My earnest wish is that your medicine may be found in every home where suffering exists."

THE HERITAGE.

The rich man's son inherits lands,
And miles of brick and stone and gold,
And he inherits soft white hands,
And tender flesh that fears the cold,
Nor dares to wear a garment old;
A heritage, it seems to me
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits cares;
A bank may break, the factory burn,
A breath may burst his bubble shares,
And soft, white hands could hardly earn
A living that would serve his turn;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits wants;
His stomach craves for dainty fare;
With sated heart he hears the pants
Of toiling ones with brown arms bare,
And wearies in his easy chair;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce would wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Stout muscles and a sinewy heart,
A hardy frame, a hardier spirit,
King of two hands, he does his part
In every useful toil and art;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth a poor man's son inherit?
Wishes o'erjoyed with humble things,
A rank adjudged by toil-worn merit,
Content that from employment springs
A heart that in its labor sings;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
A patience learned of being poor;
Courage, if sorrows come, to bear it,
A fellow-feeling that is sure
To make the outcast bless his door;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to to hold in fee.

Oh, rich man's son! there is a toil
That with all others level stands;
Large charity doth never soil,
But only whitens soft, white hands—
This is the best crop from thy lands;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being rich to hold in fee.

Oh, poor man's son! scorn not thy state;
There is worse weariness than thine,
In merely being rich and great;
Toil only gives the soul to shine,
And makes rest fragrant and benign;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prove title to your heirship vast
By record of a well-filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.
