

U.S. And Soviet Union Locked In Tight Race

By HOWARD BENEDICT
CAPE KENNEY, Fla. (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are locked in a tight race to land the first man on the moon, perhaps within three years. The winner's rewards will be substantial: national prestige, scientific knowledge, possibly military domination of space.

Who's ahead at this stage? It's hard to tell because of Soviet secrecy.

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

Here is another interesting hand from Dorothy Hayden's excellent book, Bid Better, Play Better. It appears in the chapter called the Art of Signaling, which does much to straighten out the confusion existing today over what constitutes a signal and what the signal means.

Actually, the hand is an example of upside-down signaling in defense, and in reality — although she does not mention it — the deal occurred in a national championship with Mrs. Hayden West and myself East.

Mrs. Hayden led the ace of diamonds and I signaled with the ten for a continuation. My

Canada's Viet Nam Efforts Seen Of Vital Importance

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada believes that by mild, informal diplomatic probing it can pave the way for a negotiated settlement of the Vietnamese war, External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons external affairs committee.

But he carefully worded his replies to committee questions, saying the initiative Canada is taking is delicate and vitally affects the world.

Mr. Martin said he believes the differences between the positions taken by the various parties to the war are not as rigid as they appear, and that the timing of discussions is important.

"Canada, with the approval of the United Nations, the United States, Poland and India, and with the knowledge of other governments, is engaged in an effort to bring about some basis for negotiations, and I am not anxious to cause this assignment greater difficulty than it has," Mr. Martin said.

"I can't discuss the position tion. I can only say that the time is not ripe for the calling of another Geneva conference. A great deal of groundwork is necessary, and we are engaged in that."

HAS AID AVAILABLE

Mr. Martin also told the committee the government has $1,500,000 available for external aid to Viet Nam, and is willing to contribute a large part of it in medical help. But so far the government of Viet Nam had not been able to make satisfactory arrangements to receive the aid.

He strongly defended the continued participation of Canada in the international control commissions in Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia, set up by the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina. While Canadian civilian and military personnel in Viet Nam were unable to carry out their function fully, they had an important role to play.

Russia has an updated version of the 800,000-pound thrust rocket it had been using. Improvements have upped the thrust to more than 1,000,000 pounds.

Best information available indicates the Russians plan to cluster three of the uprated rockets—each of which is a cluster of smaller engines—for total thrust of 3,000,000 pounds.

That is not enough power to send a manned ship to the moon and provide it with the means of returning to earth. Thus, the Russians would have to launch two or three rockets to establish a base in earth orbit, and then launch a single-stage lunar rocket from above the earth's atmosphere where not as much thrust is needed.

The use of an off-fired rocket gives the Soviets a booster reliability advantage. The Saturn V has not yet flown, and troubles could develop.

However, some U.S. officials believe that ground firing tests have demonstrated that the Saturn V first stage will work and they feel that by the fourth flight, scheduled in 1968, the rocket could be used to send three Apollo astronauts to the moon.

Recent statements by Russian cosmonauts indicate 1969 is their target.
