

BRISTOL

The Morell rink opened for skating on Saturday night first time for everyone to go skating. Despite the fact that it had been on the ice for weeks, it was a poor night but many skaters were there for the evening bell. Many of us recall the opening of the old rink nearly fifty years ago when hundreds came by special train, and wood sleighs and on foot, but this all died away. Will this new rink follow the old one down memory lane or will it have none? We must wait and see.

When Easter comes again it will bring back memories to a few of the old timers of the great feat of the late Robert Lapierre who downed 32 raw eggs at Alfred McEwen's store on a bet that he could drink three dozen eggs at one sitting. After downing the 36 he was refused the other three for fear of his health, but Mr. Lapierre, said he never felt better that was 79 years ago. As far as we can learn his record still stands.
