

First Fun Horse Show Is Success

The Abernethy Horse Association held its first Fun Horse Show at the farm of Leslie Prowse-Brackley, on Saturday, October 8th, before a large crowd of over 100 interested spectators. Ten riders and horses participated in various mounted games and races, as well as a modified jumping and trail class.

President, Gerald Dixon, was very pleased with the skill of the riders, many of whom were participating in this type of competition for the first time.

Judging by the comments of both the riders and the many spectators this type of horse show will become increasingly popular with the Club members and the public, and the next fun horse show to be held should see an even larger number of horses and riders taking part.

Mr. George Kitson, Hampshire, very capably acted as Judge for the events, and presented the ribbons to the winners.

Mr. Gordon Wellner announced the various classes over the Smith Sound system and his description of the events and introduction of the riders to the public, added much to the success of the show.

The executive of the Club were very grateful to the following interested people without whose generosity in loaning equipment the first show would not have been run off so well: Smith Sound System, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fraser, Mr. Don Agnew, Canadian Red Cross, S.R. Johnston Ltd., and Real Fac Agencies Ltd.

Following are the winners of ribbons in the various events:

BATTERY MATES

The combined pitching of Ken Ballam and Jon Down, and good back-stopping by catcher Bob Stewart was a key factor in Summerside's 7-5 win in the second game of the Maritime Juvenile Baseball Finals. The Summerside Boys Club was given the best-of-three championship in straight games. From the left, Ballam, Stewart, and Down.

Alan Eagleson Plays Dual Role In The Sport World

By JIM CRERAR
TORONTO (CP)—Alan Eagleson is president of Toronto Rifles of the Continental Football League but you're more likely to find him calling salary signals for hockey players.

Eagleson, a respected 33-year-old lawyer, advises about 75 hockey players on contract negotiations, taxes, education and their careers.

His clients include Terry Sawchuk, Eddie Shack and Marcel Pronovost of Toronto Maple Leafs; Bobby Nevin of New York Rangers; Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins and Carl Brewer, former defence star with the Leafs.

Eagleson is reluctant to name his other customers because he prefers not to let club owners know which players are getting legal coaching in contract talks.

But he represents 26 to 30 NHL players, 15 from the American Hockey League, six from the Central Professional League, about 20 from the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and four more Juniors from Western Canada.

He's the lawyer for the Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and the Central Ontario Track and Field Association, currently involved in a legal dispute with Lloyd Percival of Toronto, Percival, a trainer and coach, is suing after being accused of giving drugs to athletes.

Eagleson also advises two players in the Canadian Football League.

Helping athletes solve their legal problems consumes about 35 per cent of Eagleson's working day except at contract time, when he spends close to 80 per cent at it. The rest of the time is devoted to civil and criminal cases and zoning applications.

After hours there are the Rifles and Eagleson's political career. He's a Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto Lakeshore.

He spends what time is left with his wife, his son, 5, and his daughter, 2.

Much of the advice Eagleson gives hockey players concerns education.

"Sometimes I even have to discourage a boy from continuing in hockey if it's obvious his career is limited," he said. "In that case, I usually advise him to consider his education."

Eagleson doesn't subscribe to the theory that heavy junior hockey schedules keep youngsters from their studies.

"High school and junior hockey mix very well," he said. But he feels once a boy turns professional and has to play where he's told, his chances in the classroom are slim.

Eagleson hopes Orr is an exception, however.

The 18-year-old native of Parry Sound, Ont., who signed with Boston for an undisclosed amount reported as high as $50,000 over two seasons, plans to complete grade 12 by correspondence.

"Orr is getting help from a high school principal in Ontario," said Eagleson. "The Bruins are paying for his tutoring. It was part of the contract."

Eagleson, born in Port Dalhousie, Ont., and raised there, in Guelph, Ont., and Toronto, played hockey, swam and lost four teeth playing lacrosse.

Through lacrosse, he got to know Bobby Purford of the Leafs.

"It was about 1960, and we started an investment group with Billy Harris and Bobby Baum. Through them, I met other players and soon they were asking me for advice, at first on a friendly basis. But when I started to give legal advice on contract matters, it became strictly business."

"Three years ago, we approached the NHL on behalf of a group of players who wanted to sign their contracts as incorporated companies for tax purposes. Ultimately, the NHL governors turned the request down because they felt it wasn't feasible."

But Eagleson has other ways to take the sting out of the tax bite.

"For example, if a player signs a two-year contract at $20,000 a year, he's better off if the contract calls for $10,000 a year spread over four years."

White Sox Ask Burgess Waiver

CHICAGO (AP)—Chicago White Sox asked waiver Tuesday on catcher Sinky Burgess, all-time major league pinch-hitting champion, for the purpose of releasing him unconditionally.

General manager Ed Short said the 39-year-old Burgess expressed the desire to devote all his time to his automobile business in Forrest City, N.C.

Burgess batted .313 as a Sox pinch-hitter this season with 21 hits, boosting his all-time pinch-hit total to a record 136.

Wings May Put Howe Or Delvecchio Into Defence

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Gordie Howe or Alex Delvecchio on defence?

It could happen, says John Mitchell, assistant general manager of Detroit Red Wings.

When you talk of Detroit's chances of matching or bettering last year's fourth-place National Hockey League finish, you talk of defence.

Coach Sid Abel has Leo Boivin, 34, and Gary Bergman, 28, a couple of proven performers, along with Bert Marshall, 23, heading into his second season.

But he has lost hardrock Bill Gadsby, retired after 20 seasons in the NHL, and all-star Doug Barkley, out for good with an eye injury.

The Wings have talked deals with other clubs, notably New York Rangers. But Rangers, who finished last in the spring, aren't interested in helping the one club they figure they must beat for a playoff spot.

They tried to get Carl Brewer from Toronto Maple Leafs in what might have turned into a six-player deal but abandoned the idea when it appeared Brewer wouldn't report.

"We might have the replacements right in our own organization," Mitchell says, pointing to Bob Falkenberg and Bart Crashley.

But Falkenberg, up from Edmonton Oil Kings, and Crashley, with Hamilton Red Wings last season, are juniors in an area where experience is without price.

ALEX DELVECCHIO
Isn't playing like a major league he is acting like one. "I reported in at 160 pounds, but I've eaten my way up to 170. Unless I can put on some more weight, I won't make the club."

Another all-star at the training table is Peter Mahovich, a taller (six-foot-four), heavier edition of Toronto Maple Leaf's Frank. In an exhibition game against Toronto, Peter stole the puck from brother Frank and Dave Keen and went in to score. Wings won 2-1.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE
Crashley, speaking for the hopeful juniors with Detroit, says: "The average pro won't throw you any better shifts than your top junior A player—the difference is they're all throwing them at you all the time."

"In junior A the guys you have trouble with are the heavy hitters and the Danny O'Shea's. Up here, they're all O'Shea's."

points out that training camp hasn't taken on the appearance of kindergarten.

Howe is 38; Delvecchio, Bathgate, Leo Boivin and Dean Prentice are all 34.

Among the standout rookies is Doug Roberts, a Detroit native who starred at Michigan State and was rookie of the year in the Central Professional League last year; but he's another right-winger.

Goalie Roger Crozier has recovered from his mid-summer stomach problems and is backed up by Hank Bassen.

The veteran Delvecchio rates the 1966 training camp "the toughest in five years."

"Sid Abel's determined to overcome our usual slow start this year."

"But the Rangers are tougher and Boston also. This isn't going to be a three-team league anymore."

Waivers Asked On Two Mets

NEW YORK (AP)—Waivers have been requested on shortstop Roy McMillan and pitcher Bob Friend, New York Mets said Tuesday.

However, McMillan has been invited to spring training next February when it will be determined whether he has recovered from a shoulder operation he underwent last month. If he is unable to play, the Mets said, McMillan, 36, will be given another job in the organization.

Friend, 35, obtained from New York Yankees last June, posted a 5-8 record for the Mets.

Defence And Fresh Coach Plan To Push Bruins To 4th.

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

In the final game of the season last year, Boston Bruins stumbled out of the National Hockey League cellar and stood blinking in the sunlight for the first time in six years.

But they were still in fifth place, 28 points shy of the fourth-place playoff spot.

This year, rookie coach Harry Sinden is going after those points.

"Nothing comes to my mind except to fight and scratch for that fourth-place spot," he says.

The route, the Boston club believes, is through the defence.

"Hockey is going the way of football," Sinden says.

"Play strongly defensively and the goals will take care of themselves."

This is Sinden's first crack at the NHL. The youngest coach in the league at 34, he never did make the big time as a player.

But he's done all right at the jobs he's had.

He was captain of the Whitby team that won the world hockey championship in 1958; last year he was coach of the Oklahoma City Blazers when they won the Central Pro League championship.

Sinden points at the Blazers' record last year to back up his theory on how the Bruins can improve their lot.

SCORED FEWEST GOALS
Blazers scored 188 goals in 70 games, setting a league record for the lowest number of goals scored, and came away with the championship after finishing second. They allowed 203 goals, third lowest in the six-team league.

Sinden believes in giving his defencemen "more freedom than some people think is right."

He didn't hang back at the blue-line during his playing days and neither will his Bruin rearguards.

Boston has Bobby Orr, rookie sensation from Oshawa Generals, paired with slugger Gilles Marotte. Dallas Smith, up again after six years in the minors, is operating with Ted Green.

Al Langlois is paired with Don Awrey and Bobby Woytowich.

Orr, for one, is a puck-carrying defenceman who believes in going in on the goal in the style Sinden displayed when he was playing.

"I didn't hang back, and neither will Orr," Sinden says.

"Every team seems to have a player like that—Red Kelly when Detroit was winning; Pierre Pilote now; Doug Harvey when Montreal was winning.

"It looks like Orr could be that type of player."

MURPHY RETURNS
Boston's style in past years hasn't been set up "to keep people skating as hard as they should," Sinden says.

"I wouldn't say we're as adept at head-manning the puck and skating to get it back as we should be. Offensively, we're not shooting enough."

Centre and left wing are still critical spots for Boston. Bruins will be looking closely at centre Ron Schock, who spent much of last season with San Francisco.

On the left, Bruins will be depending heavily on Ron Murphy, 33, making a comeback after quitting the game last year.

The most productive line is expected to be that of Ron Stewart, Murray Oliver and Johnny Bucyk, a unit that came on strongly toward the end of last season.

In goal, it's a choice among Bernie Parent, Ed Johnston and Gerry Cheevers.

On the bench, the Bruins have a coach who wants to prove he belongs in the NHL and who doesn't want to make the mistake of overlooking any Harry Sindens who come along.

Which brings up the question—would Harry Sinden, NHL coach, have hired Sinden the defenceman?

"I doubt it," he says.

"I probably wouldn't have been able to afford me."

United Nations Trot Postponed

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Yonkers Raceway announced Tuesday the postponement of its $100,000 United Nations Trot to Tuesday night, Oct. 18, from Saturday.

The change was made after Yehyeni Dolmatov, director of the Moscow Hippodrome and in charge of the two Russian representatives, requested extra time for the Soviet horses to prepare for the 1 1/2-mile race. His trotters—Apex Hanover and Osman—arrived Tuesday.

Wisconsin Asks For New Club

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Wisconsin went to the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday to try to bring baseball back to Milwaukee, but said Atlanta could keep the Braves.

In an obscure footnote to his appeal, the state dropped its year-long legal struggle to return the National League club to Milwaukee, its home for 13 years.

Instead, the appeal asked in effect that the court give Milwaukee an expansion team as a replacement.

Ottawa Rough Riders Pick Up Numbers Lead In East

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the first time this season Ottawa Rough Riders' impressive first-place record is supported by the Eastern Football Conference statistics.

Throughout most of the year, the Rough Riders, now 10-1, have had a strong hold on first place but led in few of the eight categories in the statistics.

This week Ottawa leads in four departments—scoring, passing, punt interceptions and kickoff returns. Second-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats are tops in punt returns and punting while Montreal Alouettes lead in rushing and Toronto Argonauts in pass receiving.

Moq Racine, who kicked three singles, three converts and one field goal in Ottawa's 49-13 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers Saturday, tops the scorers with 37 points. Peter Kempf of Montreal scored two points to stay within two points of Racine.

LIBSON TOP RUSHER
Dave Thelen of Toronto split Montreal's one-two punch in the rushing department as he moved into second place behind Don Libson. Libson has gained 750 yards on 141 carries for a 5.3 average. Thelen has gained 606 yards on 135 carries for a 4.5 average. Bob Faremore of Montreal dropped into third with 595 yards on 128 carries.

Russ Jackson, a main cog in Ottawa's showing this year, has completed 119 of 227 passes for 1,222 yards. He has also thrown 17 touchdown passes.

Joe Zuger of Hamilton is second with 88 completions in 111 attempts for 923 yards.

Flanker Bobby Taylor of Toronto has caught 43 passes for 520 yards and five touchdowns to lead the reception department. Whit Tucker of Ottawa has caught 34 passes but has gained 725 yards and scored seven touchdowns.

Joe Peiner of the Rough Riders has intercepted seven passes.

SCOTT TOPS IN RETURNS
The top kickoff return man in the four-team conference is Bo Scott of Ottawa with 18 returns for 328 yards and a 27.5 average. The punt return lead belongs to Garney Henley of Hamilton with 67 returns for 367 yards and a 5.5 average.

Zuger surpassed Dave Mann of Toronto as the top punter with a 44.0 average on 88 punts for 3,870 yards. Mann has kicked 103 punts for a 43.5 average.
