thickened to a denser coating and has changed from a bluish colour to a rich brown. This not only sets the pelt off but adds considerably to its value.

The extra nine days also add greatly to the quality of mink pelts. Furthermore a lot of poor mink pelts were harvested in February and March under the old season, Mink begin falling off in both color and texture of fur early in January. They love to stretch out in a sunny spot and take a sun bath. It doesn't take many hours exposed to a late February or March sun to singe and curl the tips of the guard hairs. This is known to the trade as 'singed' and cuts deeply into the pelts value. I have examined mink pelts taken in March that were as red as our clay roads and the fur looked like it had the long guard hairs clipped with a razor blade.

The practice of setting traps on or around a muskrat house or mink den is strictly prohibited by the Game Act. For the information of trappers I quote Section (12) of the Act: "No person shall cut, spear, break, destroy or interfere with a beaver house or dam, a muskrat house or den, a mink den or set a trap within 10 feet of the house or den of a beaver, muskrat or mink." A wise trapper does not interfere with a muskrat house. If the house is cut into the occupants have to leave as a prowling fox or raccoon will quickly dig out the break supposing it is temporarily filled in. In such cases muskrats have no place to go unless they happen to have a spare den in some bank. They are not allowed to enter another den for each family have their own exclusive quarters.

The increase on bounty on raccoons - - - will be an added inducement to trap those animals. The pelt of a raccoon has more value than that of a red fox but skinning and fleshing a coon is quite a chore. Unless the fat is scraped off clean a heating process sets in and the fur begins to shiver. Shippers sometime wonder why an apparently No. 1 coon pelt fetches a price far below the figure expected. Coons are destructive animals. They'll gather around a trout spawning spring in late fall and do as much harm as a man with a jig. They have fore paws like hands and can flip trout out onto the bank slick as you please.

A farmer of my acquaintance built a dam last fall. He told me that approximately two dozen trout, some of them eight and nine inches long, were trapped in a shallow pool below the dam after the water was shut off. He came back the next morning with a dip net, intending to transfer his trout back into his dam. They were all gone and the sand and mud bank of the pool was padded with tracks. He blamed a beaver for the work. The same thing happened to me and I soon put him right on who the real culprit was - - - a raccoon or maybe more than one. A fox is often blamed for what the gentleman with the black mask - - - has done. A fox has enough to answer for without being saddled with what another predator does. Foxes are still on the increase and the countryside is almost overrun with the black stockinged scavengers. I believe that field men as the answer and that no appreciable decrease in their numbers will be noticed until the mice die off. In the meantime B'er Fox is enjoying some tasty side dishes on our valuable game birds.

best part of it is that unlike an earlier generation the kids will not have to cover if the doorbell rings in the morning. They will not have the guilty knowledge that they damaged somebody else's property and the Police are coming to make them repair or pay for it. This alone is one of the better features of the present day Hall-lawen celebration.

This morning the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs will be all over town selling the traditional apples. This is a feature of the celebrations which cannot be overlooked as it means much to the younger boys to have sufficient funds to take care of their various activities throughout the year. These range all the way from ordinary Scouting and Cub work to the big jamborees. And these are the things which help to build real understanding of citizenship.

Hope For Break In Montreal Murder

MONTREAL, (CP) - Police said Thursday they are still hoping for an early break in the case of a man whose bullet-pierced and mutilated body was found Wednesday in an east-end land.

Police said a woman has been in touch with them and may be able to identify the remains. They decline to disclose her name.

of U. S. lines through Edmonton to Alaska.

Mr. Chevrier said Mexican authorities had granted TCA a permit to operate from Montreal and Toronto to Mexico City via Tampa. TCA previously had been authorized by the U. S. to operate from Canada to Tampa.

TCA plans had been based on combining these operations in a single service which would carry Canadian traffic as far as Tampa and then continue on to Mexico City. The flight would carry any Canadian traffic bound for that point, but no American traffic between Tampa and Mexico City.

Parallels Cases

Mr. Chevrier said this system is in wide use among international airlines. TCA operated through London and Paris to Düsseldorf, Germany, in this fashion and Air France operated through Montreal to Chicago.

white - mustached man long renowned as a medical missionary, musician, philosopher and doctor. He enjoyed a wide reputation when he went into the African jungles 40 years ago to serve humanity as "man to my fellow man." He and his wife established a hospital at Lambarene, in French Equatorial Africa.

Schwitzer has been called the world's "greatest living missionary." A group of prominent artists, writers and musicians of 17 countries in 1950 named him "the man of the century."

As a philosopher he is famed for his authoritative interpretation of Kant and his penetrating assessments of modern civilization. He has written books on subjects ranging from music, German literature and Bach to studies of Christ. As an organist he has attracted large audiences in Europe.

The son of a protestant Alsatian village vicar, Schwitzer took his doctorate in philosophy, his licence in theology and his medical degree before he was 30. An accomplished organist, he was responsible in his early years for starting a world wide renaissance of the music of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Other candidates known to have been considered this year included former President Truman and American historian James Shotwell; Indian Prime Minister Nehru; former UN secretary-general Trygve Lie of Norway; Frank Buchman, American founder of the moral rearmament movement; and Philip Noel-Baker, British Labor politician and humanist.
